Our Correspondent, Barishal

Locals call it 'Morar Bhita' (house of the dead), as at least 135 civilians, mostly women and children, were slaughtered at the place by the Pakistan army in 1971.

But after about 50 years of the massacre, no memorial was made at the site -- in Nandipara of Harhar village, under Batajor union of Gournadi upazila.

On May 15, 1971, the Pakistani occupation forces, with the help of local collaborators, opened fire indiscriminately on the inhabitants, about 400, of Nandipara and killed almost one-third of them. The youngest of the victims was five months of age while the oldest was

The injured party men were taking treatment at different private clinics and hospitals in and outside the district.

Contacted, officer-in-charge (investigation) of Kishoreganj Sadar Police Station Abdullah Al Mamun said defying the government's instruction for not holding any public gathering as coronavirus pandemic takes its serious turn, BNP men brought out the processions in Sholakia and Ekrampur areas and they also ransacked several shops on their way.

Bangladesh behind Nepal

"This suggests a lag between 4G coverage rollout and usage of 4G services. This lag in usage is largely explained by issues related to the affordability of devices, low levels of knowledge and digital skills, a perceived lack of relevance, as well as safety and security concerns.

High sector-specific taxes, a fragmented licensing regime, as well as issues with the pricing and usage restrictions on spectrum have been identified as barriers to expanding coverage.

Bangladesh, however, fares better compared to Nepal and Sri Lanka in terms of 4G connections. Only 17 per cent of the population has 4G connections in Nepal, and 18 per cent in Sri Lanka, according to the report.

India has the highest 4G connections at 63 percent of the population followed by Pakistan

Bangladesh has 17 crore mobile connections. Of them, nine crore are unique subscribers, giving a penetration rate of 54 percent as of December 2020. Some 47 percent of subscribers use 2G connections and 25 per cent 3G connections. The report said internet and digital technology played a key role in helping drive economic growth and societal development in Bangladesh.

Digital technologies, mobile in particular, will be crucial to implementing the government's 2041 Perspective Plan, achieving the Sustainable Development Goals, and recovering economically in the aftermath of the Covid-19 pandemic, the report said.

crimes against humanity and war involvement in grievous crimes crimes. A proposal for amendment to the International Crimes (Tribunal) Act, 1973 for trying the organisations is awaiting the cabinet's approval," the minister said.

He said they would take necessary measures to this effect after the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic was over.

But the long delay is utterly disappointing for justice-seekers and war crimes victims and their families who have long been demanding trial of anti-liberation organisations, including Jamaat-e-Islami.

Delivering its verdict in the case against former Jamaat ameer Ghulam Azam on July 15, 2013, the International Crimes Tribunal-1 observed, "...Jamaat-e-Islami, as a political party under the leadership of accused Prof Ghulam Azam, intentionally functioned as a criminal organisation, especially during the War of Liberation of Bangladesh in

Established by highly controversial Abul Ala Moududi in 1941, the Jamaat had been banned twice before the independence of Bangladesh, in 1959 and 1964, for creating communal violence.

In independent Bangladesh, the party was banned immediately after liberation but was later allowed by the Ziaur Rahman regime to do

Eminent writer and war crimes researcher Shahriar Kabir said it was frustrating that the government was not taking initiative for trying the antiliberation organisations.

"Only the individual war criminals have been tried so far after the international crimes tribunals were established. But no initiative was taken yet to try the organisations, including the then Pakistan army high command, Jamaat-e-Islami, Razakar, Al Badr, Al Shams who were directly involved in the crimes against humanity and war crimes in 1971, which is not acceptable to the war crimes victims," he told The Daily Star recently. Shahriar Kabir also said the law minister has been saying since 2014 that the government would amend the International Crimes Tribunal Act to try the organisations but no initiative was taken yet.

He, however, argued that such organisations can be tried under the a law chamber that conducts research

> The six organisations were Islami Chhatra Sangha (ICS), Jamaat's then student wing now called Islami Chhatra Shibir, Shanti Committee, Razakar Bahini, Al Badr Bahini, Al Shams Bahini, and Jamaat's mouthpiece Daily Sangram.

The demand for the trial of Jamaat as an organisation got momentum after youths occupied the Shahbagh intersection in the capital in February 2013 calling for the highest punishment to be handed down to war criminals and a ban on Jamaat and Shibir.

Following the protests, amended government International Crimes (Tribunals) Act, 1973, allowing the state to appeal against inadequate sentencing.

Some legal experts at that time said the Act had no provision for handing down punishment to any organisation and that the law should be amended again before the trial starts.

So far, a total of 100 persons have been tried for 1971 crimes at two separate special tribunals with six of them executed in the last 11 years.

Besides, appeal hearings of a total 22 war-crimes related cases have been pending with the Appellate Division for around 28 months. There is no possibility of quick hearing and disposal of the appeals due to the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic.

The Awami League-led government formed the first International Crimes Tribunal (ICT-1) on March 25, 2010 in line with the party's electoral pledge to try people who committed crimes against humanity and war crimes in

The second tribunal (ICT-2) was formed on March 22, 2012, to expedite the trials. But the government kept one of the two tribunals almost dormant since September 15, 2015 following the drop of number of pending cases at the tribunals.

The ICT-1 has delivered a total of 31 judgments on war crimes related cases since February 28, 2013 to February 11 this year, while the ICT-2 has delivered 11 verdicts on such cases since January 21, 2013 to July 16, 2015, according to the information available on their

> Supreme Court spokesperson Mohammad Saifur Rahman said his office has no specific information about the pending appeals filed against the ICT verdicts.

> The last war-crime related appeal hearing took place at the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on December 3, 2019. Convicted war criminal Syed Mohammad Qaisar filed it, challenging the death penalty handed to him by a war-crimes tribunal in 2014.

> However, law minister Anisul Haq said the progress so far has been satisfying.

> "Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina led government was pledge-bound to bring the people, who had committed crimes against humanity and war crimes during the Liberation War, to trial. We are satisfied that the prime minister's commitment has been fulfilled as several war criminals have been convicted and sentenced to death and life imprisonment. Some of them were executed," he said.

> Attorney General AM Amin Uddin told this newspaper that the government has formed the tribunals in order to fulfil the people's desire and expectations for trying the war criminals.

> The tribunals have delivered several verdicts and many of the verdicts have already been executed after the apex court have disposed of the appeals and some appeals are pending with "I feel the government has fulfilled the people's expectations," he said.

The talk was organised by the Bangladesh Embassy in Belgium and Luxembourg, and Mission to the European Union in Brussels on 29 March, according to a statement of the Bangladesh embassy in Brussels.

"The military's reaction in the form of imprisoning Sheikh Mujib and initiating Genocide against the Bengalis To this day, no apology has been forthcoming and I think the people of Pakistan should urge the government of Pakistan to offer a formal apology to the people of Bangladesh for all the atrocities that were committed in 1971 ... an apology is the most courteous thing ...' said Haqqani, now a senior fellow and director for South and Central Asia at Hudson Institute. He said Bangabandhu is not only the greatest Bangalee of all time, but an iconic figure of struggle for freedom that the world has seen.

The envov said Bangabandhu is in the same league of great leaders as Mahatma Gandhi and Nelson Mandela.

Bangabandhu had created the sense of freedom among the Bengali nation during his long struggle for independence and gave all the directives to his people to prepare for a war in his historic speech on March 7, 1971, in Dhaka, Haqqani said. He added that the then East Pakistan was the "Golden Goose" to the Pakistani ruling elites as most of the foreign exchange was earned from the eastern part. Haqqani said Bangladesh is one of the fastest growing countries in the world and the most successful country in South Asia -- the contribution of Bangabandhu and his daughter, current Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina.

Foreign Minister AK Abdul Momen, who addressed the event as the chief guest, said it was expected that Pakistan would apologise formally on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of Bangladesh's Pakistan's independence. Prime Minister Imran Khan sent a video message on the occasion but did not apologise.

Indira insisted on following "proper international norms" since any hasty step against Pakistan, a member of the UN, would be unlikely to find favour internationally.

TAJUDDIN ENTERS INDIA

Tajuddin Ahmad and Amirul Islam crossed over to India in the early hours of March 30, 1971. They met senior Border Security Force (BSF) officer in West Bengal, Golok Majumdar, at the border post. Tajuddin briefed on the situation in Bangladesh and handed over a list of Awami League leaders and members of the National Assembly. the trip to the foreign ministry. Government officials expressed optimism

The government has already relocated that the UN would be involved in the some 13,000 Rohingyas to Bhasan Char from relocation of Rohingyas after the visit, as the Cox's Bazar in phases since December last facilities on Bhasan Char are much better than those in Cox's Bazar.

Bangladesh Navy implemented the Tk 3,100 crore housing project after some 750,000 Rohingyas had fled a military crackdown in Myanmar's Rakhine state in 2017 and took shelter in camps in Teknaf and Ukhia.

Apart from the risk of landslides in the hilly terrain, the government cited issues such as drug peddling, human trafficking, genderbased violence, conflicts between factions of the refugee communities in Cox's Bazar, and environmental degradation as major reasons for the relocation.

The UN had raised concerns over risks of tidal surge and cyclone at the remote island, but the government said with 120 brick-built cluster villages and 120 cyclone shelters, flood protection embankments, facilities for education, farming and fishing, hospitals and playgrounds, the Char is a much better living place than the Cox's Bazar camps.

The UN said it wanted to send one of its technical teams to the island to assess the housing facilities. Asked by the government, it even submitted the terms of reference for the visit in December 2019. The move got stalled after that. Project officials said separate buildings for the UN and other international aid agencies have also been constructed on Bhasan Char. After relocation of the first batch of Rohingyas in December, some 44 NGOs volunteered to go there and started providing humanitarian assistance to the refugees. There were concerns over how funds needed for 100,000 Rohingyas would be managed after their relocation. Sources said it seems that the UN team is happy seeing the facilities and its report would

BLOOD TELEGRAM

On March 30, 1971, American Consul General Archer K Blood in Dhaka, sent a telegram to the US State Department. After providing gory details of the Pakistan army's brutality in Dhaka University, the telegram read: Question of whether university professors subject of pre-planned purge still unanswered although actively being looked into. Academics met since military crackdown fearful for safety and in hiding. They believe they [are] subject to elimination. Systematic destruction of academic records at university suggests campaign underway to erase all traces [of] current "trouble making" generation at Dacca university. Figure of thousand dead at university nonetheless strikes us as exaggerated, although nothing these days is inconceivable.
