ONE YEAR INTO FIRST CONFIRMED COVID CASE

Treatment facility in Pabna remains same

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Pabna

The First Covid-19 patient was identified in Pabna on April 16 last year but on year down the line the treatment facility in the district remains the same although now there are several thousand Covid-19 patients in the district.

There is no scope to manage critical patients in the district as the hospitals are not properly equipped yet.

"The number of Covid-19 patients is increasing still but we have the same old treatment facility as we had a year back. We don't have PCR lab, 4-bed ICU unit is remaining inoperative, central oxygen supply work in 250-bed Pabna General Hospital is yet to be completed" Dr Saleh Mohammad Ali, medicine consultant and also a specialist doctor for the treatment of Covid-19, said.

"Hospitals are not properly equipped while we are mostly treating patients with mild symptoms here in Pabna," Dr Saleh said.

"We don't have the scope to manage critical patients here," he added.

A total of 2,065 have been tested positive in Pabna of them 193 patients have been identified in last one week. A total of 12 Covid-19 patients have reportedly died in last one year according to the district civil surgeon's office.

Dr KM Abu Jafar, deputy civil surgeon, said the district health department is whole heartedly trying to install a PCR lab in the district and has already submitted a project of Tk 2.7 crore, which is yet to be sanctioned. "Due to the lack of testing facility, we are taking samples from the patients and sending Sirajganj's PCR lab for examination," the deputy civil surgeon said.

A 100-bed Covid-19 unit is running in Pabna General Hospital's medicine unit, he added.

Visiting the Pabna General Hospital, it was found that 100-bed Covid-19 unit has been reduced to 50-bed due to less number of patients in the last few months.

Four-bed ICU unit in the hospital is not functioning and the high flow nasal cannula is also not in use due to the lack of central oxygen supply. The work of installing central oxygen supply in the hospital is yet to be completed.

"Due to less number of Covid-19 patients last year, we have allotted 50 beds for medicine unit patients. Suspected patients are kept in isolation and a few patients are admitted in the Covid-19 unit," Dr Md. Aiyub Hossain, assistant director of Pabna General Hospital, said adding that the hospital authority has preparation to reuse the 100 beds if the surge of the patients further increases.

"Due to lack of central oxygen supply, we cannot operate the ICU unit and the training of doctors and nurses could not be initiated till now to operate the unit." Md Ruhul, an administrative officer of the hospital said.

Md Aiyub Hossain, however, said "We are trying to run the ICU unit as soon as possible. Selected doctors and nurses will be trained soon for operating the ICU unit."

The work for installing the central-oxygen supply in the hospital is undergoing but the progress of the work is slow, Aiyub said adding that the work is expected to be finished within the next two months.

A zamindar mansion taken over by drug runners

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Lalmonirhat

A place that could have been an attractive destination for archaeology and history enthusiasts has turned into a den of antisocial elements.

The derelict mansion, built in a bygone era by the then Nawdanga zamindar, in Nawdanga union of Kurigram's Phulbari upazila, is now a safe haven for drug dealers and addicts -- thanks to the indifference of law enforcers and government departments concerned.

Without any routine patrol or raid by law enforcers in the area, drug trade and abuse continues in the abandoned building openly, almost all throughout the day till late at night, said locals.

They also said that they are too afraid to report the illegal activity in the building to the police as the latter never take action against the criminals who are well-known for their involvement in drugs trade in the area.

Requesting not to be named, a resident of the area said those who buy and sell drugs in the building are affluent and politically influential.

Although the increased availability of drugs in the area has been a great concern for most law-abiding citizens and parents in the locality, the police are quizzically turning a blind eye to the crime, he also alleged.

Nawdanga Union Parishad Chairman Musabber Ali Musa said many people from different parts of the country visit the historical Nawdanga Zamindar mansion every day and they unfortunately get a negative impression of the locality after finding empty Phensedyl bottles and other drug paraphernalia lying strewn in the building.

He had informed the police of the matter more than once, but they did not yet take any action, he alleged, adding that the police need to step up and protect the historical zamindar mansion as well as ensure peace and security of citizens.

Abu Zafar, assistant director of Department of Narcotics Control in Kurigram claimed that he was not aware of the situation.

Although they cannot always raid drug dens due to limited work force and transportation, they would soon take necessary action against the drug dealers at the Nawdanga zamindar mansion, he added.

Contacted, Phulbari Police Station Officer-in-Charge Rajib Kumar Roy admitted that the entire upazila of Phulbari is facing drug problem.

He also said that they would go into immediate action against the illicit drug trade at the mansion.

Empty Phensedyl bottles and other drug paraphernalia are a common sight inside the derelict mansion of Nawdanga zamindars, in Nawdanga union of Kurigram's Phulbari upazila.

Depression, anxiety rise percent in 2018, according to the study.

"We compared the findings of several studies done in 2020 and 2021 with the 2018 nationwide mental health survey. Based on this, it is confirmed that the prevalence of anxiety has increased four to six folds during the pandemic," Dr Helal Uddin Ahmed, co-author of the latest bulletin published by the IEDCR, told The Daily Star yesterday.

The study suggested that the collateral damage from the pandemic has continued with more people reporting rising levels of anxiety, depression and even suicidal thoughts.

Worryingly, around 38 people daily, and around 14,000 throughout the year, have committed suicide since March 2020, when the pandemic had begun, said the study revealed in a bulletin published by the Institute of Epidemiology, Disease Control and Research (IEDCR).

Of them, at least seven had committed suicide "specifically due to Covid-19 related reason", according to the investigator of the latest NIMH study.

In 2019, this average was 32 per day, according to another study published in medRxiv journal by two researchers of the department of public health and informatics at Jahangirnagar University.

Physicians at the NIMH said they observed signs of deteriorating mental health in reaction to the toll of coronavirus infections and deaths and to the life-altering restrictions imposed by lockdowns.

He said, "The Covid-19 pandemic has already turned syndemic. It means that the pandemic is creating many problem [along with physical health issues] in human life indirectly. People from all occupations are suffering from a mental crisis. So, we have to put importance of the issue of mental health."

THE REASONS AND WAYOUT

According to the NIMH study, panic over being infected with the virus, uncertainty over getting treatment, fear of death, economic upheaval and unemployment were among the reasons contributing to the mental health crisis.

The IEDCR bulletin also mentioned that the healthcare staffers of all levels are also suffering from stress and losing confidence due to Covid-19, which is badly affecting their mental health.

In this context, experts have suggested not to panic due to Covid-19 or any other reasons.

"We observed that the mental health problems have increased among people of all ages in different forms during the pandemic year. While the coronavirus disease itself is causing mental problems, the uncertainty over livelihood due to the lockdown has further aggravated it," Dr Nayem Akhter Abbassi, psychiatrist at the NIMH, told The Daily Star yesterday.

Dr Selim said, "Unless we can keep mental strength, we will not be able to sustain this pandemic. We have to take this pandemic as [a] normal [issue], because it will not be over soon. We have to learn how to live with Covid-19 instead of panicking."

"Panic weakens the normal immunity of the human body. So, it is urgent to reduce mental stress," the study said.

To stay safe from mental illness, the study mentioned made some suggestions, which include sleeping regularly on time, staying busy with favourite topics and tasks, spending quality time with family members, doing physical exercise every day, performing religious rituals at home, and being kind to others.

They also suggested contacting physicians or calling online health service numbers -- 16263 or 333 -- for further help.

Even in pandemic for the health sector, which has the lowest implementation rate among the significantly large ministries.

"It is shameful because even the biggest health crisis of the last hundred years appears to have made no difference to the implementation capacity of the very ministry which was supposed to be at the frontline. It is as if the commanders on the battlefield kept napping while the enemy was on a strategic retreat to mutate into a more ferocious force."

Dr Taufique Joarder, public health and health system expert and vice-chairperson of Public Health Foundation of Bangladesh, said, "Health services division has been showing such inefficiency for a long time. The reason behind such chronic inefficiency is we do not have the right people in the right positions in the health services sector. A very few policymakers of this sector have knowledge on technical issues of public health management, which seriously decreases efficiency."

"On the other hand, our recruitment and placement system are faulty. We recruit only doctors in the health sector through the Bangladesh Civil Service Examination, but without public health professionals, health economists, biostatisticians, epidemiologists and health communication experts, an efficient health service sector cannot be developed," he added.

Pradip Ranjan Chakraborty, secretary, IMED of planning ministry, said, "Slow financial progress does not mean there is no physical progress. Sometimes ministries pay bills to the contractors after thoroughly evaluating the projects, which may cause such delays in disbursing the funds."

"To increase efficiency, we have suggested not changing project directors frequently and not assigning more than one project to a project director. If all the divisions and ministries work in a synchronised manner, we shall be able to increase our efficiency," added Pradip.
