VACCINATION CHALLENGE FOR GOVT

First jab to go on despite shortage

Experts suggest its suspension until arrival of next consignment

MOHAMMAD AL-MASUM MOLLA

Despite the uncertainty over getting Oxford-AstraZeneca vaccine from India, the government is adamant on giving people their first shot of the Covid vaccine while administering the second shot to those who received their first jab earlier.

Experts disagree. They called for the immediate suspension of giving the first dose until the country received vaccines, be it from Serum Institute of India or from other sources.

The government has around 27 lakh doses of the vaccine remaining. An official of the Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS) said those would run out within 10-12 days if the vaccination went on at this pace.

Iqbal Arslan, president of Swadhinata Chikitshak Parishad or Swachip, said, "I don't think that we will get the vaccines soon. So my personal opinion is that administration of the first dose should be stopped. If we cannot administer the second dose, then the first shot will be a waste."

Md Sayedur Rahman, chairman of pharmacology department at the BSMMU, said, "The government should focus on the second dose. If needed, the government should purchase the Oxford vaccine from other sources at higher prices. The inoculation of first dose should be stopped right away."

ANNUAL TARGET TO FIGHT CLIMATE CHANGE

Hasina pushes for $100b funds

Calls for special attention to the vulnerable communities

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina has put forward four suggestions at the Leaders Summit on Climate, including cutting global emission, transferring technology and ensuring attainment of the annual target of mobilising $100 billion as committed by developed countries.

The developed countries had made the commitment to mobilise $100 billion, Green Climate Fund, per year by 2020 for climate actions in the developing countries, but only $30 billion could be mobilised so far.

Stressing the need for the fund, Hasina said it should be balanced 50:50 between adaptation and mitigation with special attention to vulnerable communities.

Presently, a major portion of the $30 billion is spent on mitigation projects, whereas the developing countries need adaptation more than

"We have to step up," Biden said. "We have to take action -- all of us."
