Dengue fear creeping in amid Covid

June accounts for 59.5pc of 2021 infections; experts for steps to destroy Aedes breeding grounds

HELEMUL ALAM

With the onset of monsoon in the country creating suitable breeding conditions for Aedes mosquito larvae, the month of June has so far accounted for 59.5 percent of the dengue cases recorded this year.

The number of infected patients yesterday was 12. Aedes mosquitoes are carriers of the dengue and chikungunya viruses.

Experts warned that if authorities concerned and people of the country do not take necessary steps to destroy breeding sources, there is a danger that dengue cases may increase fast.

That would be even more dangerous than other years because health services in the country is already strained due to the coronavirus pandemic, they said.

According to the Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS), 247 patients have so far been infected with dengue virus since January 1, 12 of whom were infected yesterday.

Of the total people infected this year, 147 were infected in the first 22 days of June -- or 59.5 percent of the total infected.

New variant rings alarm

India says 'delta plus' now a Covid variant of concern as nearly two dozen cases detected in three states

AGENCIES

India has declared a new coronavirus variant to be of concern, and said nearly two dozen cases had been detected in three states so far.

The variant AY.1, identified locally as "Delta plus" and first identified in Europe, has been found in at least 22 cases across Maharashtra, Kerala and Madhya Pradesh states, the health ministry said.

The ministry also said Delta plus showed increased transmissibility and advised states to increase testing. Health experts warned that it may trigger a third Covid-19 wave in the country.

India vaccinated a record 8.6 million people on Tuesday as it began offering free shots to all adults, but experts doubted it could maintain that pace.

The country reported 50,848 new infections over the past 24 hours, health ministry data showed yesterday. The South Asian nation's total infections now stand at 30.03 million, according to a Reuters tally.

The Indian health ministry said the Delta plus variant has also been found in at least nine countries, including the United Kingdom, the United States, Japan, Russia, India, Portugal, Switzerland, Nepal and China.

This variant could account for 90 percent of new Covid cases in the European Union in the coming months, the bloc's disease control agency said yesterday.

This variant of the coronavirus now represents more than 20 percent of infections in the US in the last two weeks, or double what it was when the Centers for Disease Control last reported on the variant's prevalence.
