colleges. Those who are not under the government's MPO (Monthly Pay Order) scheme are in a graver situation as they neither get their salaries from the schools nor do they get support from the government.

There are about two lakh non-MPO teachers at 37,000 secondary schools, madrasas and technical institutions in the country, according to the data of the teachers' association.

Under the MPO, teachers of a private school gets 100 percent basic salary, Tk 1,500 house rent and medical allowance.

In Bangladesh, the teachers of non-MPO secondary schools and colleges have always been ill-paid. They provide private tuition to make ends meet. But that too came to a halt during the pandemic.

Teachers said they are trying to run their families by borrowing from relatives and friends. Some of them have already switched professions, while some are having to earn their livelihood now by selling fruits and vegetables.

Meanwhile, many of them went back to their villages after finding no hope in the capital.

Nazrul Islam Rony, president of Bangladesh Teachers' Association, said although the government is providing Tk 5,000 financial assistance to each of the 81,000 non-MPO teachers, the support is not enough to ease their

"No one is paying heed to the silent cries of non-government educators. Eid is a festival for all but it will not bring any joy to many teachers," he told The Daily Star.

Speaking to this correspondent, a number of teachers said there were only a handful of schools that are still able to disburse salaries and festival bonuses from their savings, without having to be completely dependent on students' tuition fees.

But the situation is bad for most Tofazzal Hossain, headteacher of Trinity High School in the capital, said, "Apart from teaching in the under consideration right now.

school, the teachers give private tuitions. Now that the schools are closed and students mostly are staying at home, they have lost both means of earning.'

Halima Begum, principal of T&T Boys High School, said the teachers did not get festival allowances for last Eid-ul-Azha last year and the immediate past Eid-ul-Fitr.

"We will not get the allowance for this Eid either," she said.

Ziaul Kabir Dulu, president of Obhibabok Oikya Forum, a platform of guardians, said a huge number of parents either lost their jobs or are earning less due to the pandemic.

"Many are struggling to pay for living expenses of their families and even their house rents. In such a situation, it is not possible for them to pay tuition fees.

Educationists say the government should come forward and help the institutions with financial assistance.

"The teachers cannot depend on tuition fees for their salaries. The government should come forward with subsidy during this tough time," said Dhaka University Prof Emeritus Serajul Islam Choudhury.

"Many have been leaving their jobs or losing interest in the profession. If the situation worsens, the recovery of education after Covid-19 will be tough," he warned.

Rony suggested that the government provide soft loans or loans without interest to the schools as a temporary solution. "The amount would be repaid once the situation is back to normal.'

Prof Syed Md Golam Faruk, director general of Directorate of Secondary and Higher Education, said they are urging capable guardians to pay the tuition fees.

"Both the guardians and the school authorities should act reasonably... We are providing one-time incentives to non-MPO teachers and staffers, which would be some sort of relief for His son Hasan Alam, a rickshaw puller in the city, said, "We never thought that one day my father would beg and I would pull rickshaw in the city. If the mill authorities would pay my father in time, he could have established a shop or any small

According to BJMC sources, the organisation owes non-permanent workers Tk 323 crore in arrears from 2015 to 2020 and wages of 14 weeks between 2019 and 2020.

On Sunday, BJMC chairman Abdur Rouf said Tk 212.08 crore has been allocated exclusively for the arrears of 21,000 non-permanent workers.

"We have not received any allocation for the pending wages [from 2019-20] yet," he said, adding that the workers will have to submit unique ID number, token, national ID cards and, if needed, bank account details to receive the payment.

"We have disbursed the funds to the mills today [on Sunday]. I am hopeful that the mills will start to pay the workers tomorrow [yesterday]," said Abdur Rouf.

have not been informed anything about the payment.

"I have submitted all my papers to the mill authority and they confirmed me that the papers were all in order. However, I am yet to get any information about my payment from the mill authority," said jute mill worker Imran.

Talking to this correspondent on Sunday, workers' leader Ruhul Amin said, "Previously, we had seen that BJMC announced list of workers who would receive payment. However, till now, the workers have not received any notification. So, we are still uncertain about the payment."

According to BJMC sources most of the rest 11,000 non-permanent workers have been excluded from payment list mainly due spelling mistakes with their ID cards.

"They will also get their payment gradually once the issues with their identity papers are solved," said the BJMC chairman. Besides, payment of a few thousand permanent workers are also pending due to problems with their papers. As of July 4, BJMC has paid Tk 1664.72 crore to 31,832 permanent workers as their unpaid wages, pensions and other compensations.

However, Ruhul Amin said, "When thousands of crores of taka are laundered from Bangladesh, the government turns a blind eye on jute mill workers. It cannot pay the hardearned wages of the workers in a single instalment. By procrastinating the payment, BJMC actually wants to retain their authority over the jute BJMC is the government body which regulates and supervises the state-run jute mills.

"Workers will not tolerate such injustice anymore," Ruhul said and demanded clearing all dues of the jute mill workers before the Eid

World's first 3D-printed steel pedestrian traffic.

Researchers at Imperial College London are involved with assessing the "performance" of the bridge, which is packed with sensors, as it's being walked on.

Data collected from the sensors will enable experts to monitor how it changes over its lifespan, such as if the steel yields due to footfall, and measure how the public interacts with the bridge, such as how many people are using it. "A 3D-printed metal structure large and strong enough to handle pedestrian traffic has never been constructed before," said Imperial cocontributor Professor Leroy Gardner of the Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering.

"We have tested and simulated the structure and its components throughout the printing process and upon its completion, and it's fantastic to see it finally open to the public."

Sensor data will also be put into a "digital twin" of the bridge - a computerised version that imitates the real-life physical version.

Performance of the physical bridge will be tested against the twin, which will help answer questions about the adequacy of 3D-printed steel and inform future construction projects.

The mammoth construction effort required 4.5 tonnes of stainless steel to print the bridge into the elaborate, curved design. The bridge was printed in four main pieces, plus the four "corner swirls", which were then manually welded together. According to MX3D, the result is more than just a functional object for the public, but an art installation and a celebration of technology.

In the 132-page verdict, the HC also ordered the government to ban plastic bags in the country and to construct separate bicycle lanes on all roads and highways and establish parks, walkways and bicycle lanes on the banks of rivers and canals in order to protect the environment.

At the same time, the court has given its opinions on 14 environment issues.

It asked the authorities to formulate a master plan to make Bangladesh cent percent self-reliant in renewable energy and to establish a separate ministry in this regard.

The HC bench of Justice Ashraful Kamal and Justice Razik-Al-Jalil came up with the verdict.

On December 2 last year, the HC bench had delivered the verdict following a writ petition filed by Bangladesh Environmental Lawyers Association (Bela).

The petition challenged the activities of Unique Property Development Ltd (UPDL) and Sonargaon Economic Zone (SEZ) owned by businessman Mohammad Noor Ali near the bank of the Meghna.

In the full text of the verdict, the HC declared illegal the inaction of authorities concerned to prevent the companies from grabbing and farmlands in the area.

The court asked the government to take necessary steps to give a one-hour class on the importance, management and development of wetlands every two months to the students of all academic institutions in the country.

The government has been asked to form an authority to protect and preserve the world heritages like Sundarbans, historical mosques in Bagerhat and Paharpur Buddhabihar.

The court asked the authorities concerned to geographically locate all wetlands in the country through satellite and list and display them in public places at all unions, upazilas and districts for raising awareness among people.

In the verdict, the HC also asked the local administrations to arrange rallies, seminars and other awareness programmes about the necessity and fficacy of wetlands.

The court asked the Department of Environment and the local administration to jointly assess the amount of agricultural and wetlands of the six mouzas that were encroached upon and filled up by the companies of Noor Ali and to set the amount of compensations that would be paid to the people affected by the companies. The mouzas are Pirojpur, Jainpur, Chhoyhissa, Char Bhabonathpur, Batibandha and Ratanpur mouzas.

The court also directed the local administration to restore the agricultural and wetlands to their original state within six months by removing sand after realising the cost from the companies.

The HC bench made it mandatory for attaching an environmental clearance certificate with an application filed by an individual or a company seeking permission to establish an Economic Zone.

It orders the government to include Ecoside (hurting and killing the biodiversity and wildlife) as an offence in the International Crimes Tribunal

The HC judges congratulated the media and writ petitioner Bela for their effective roles in protecting and improving the environment including wetlands in the country.

Officials concerned have been ordered to send the copy of the HC verdict to all the authorities concerned including Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina for taking necessary steps.

The HC bench kept the writ petition as continuing mandamus so that any aggrieved person can move a prayer before it for necessary orders on the issue in the future.

Later that year, an MRP machine was sent to Tashkent and a group of eight to 10 officials from the passport department also visited Uzbekistan.

During his recent visit to Tashkent, Momen asked Md Zahangir Alam, Bangladesh ambassador to Uzbekistan, whether the MRP machine was working properly.

What the ambassador said in reply was very disappointing for him.

"The machine was still in the box .. It could not be made operational as the technician, who had the secret passcode, was not in the team of eight to 10 officials of the passport department that had visited Uzbekistan," the foreign minister said.

Hefajat's Mamunul, brother lose sway Recently, the Bangladesh Waqf

A court under the Waqf Estate had recently issued a rule to hand over the madrasa in the capital's Mohammadpur to the new 21-member Waqf committee.

Mahfuzul Hague was the muhtamim (principal) of the madrasa and also the secretary general of Bangladesh Qawmi Madrasa Education Board(Befaq).

Mamunul was the madrasa's main

In presence of members of police and various intelligence agencies, Md Abdul Awal, executive magistrate of the Dhaka deputy commissioner's office, handed over control to the new committee around 2:30pm yesterday.

On behalf of the committee, Mohammad Abdur Rahim, motowalli of the Waqf Estate Committee, took charge of the madrasa, which has around 4,000 students in three branches -- two in Mohammadpur and one in Basila.

Sensing they are going to lose control of the madrasa, Mahfuzul, along with students and teachers who follow him, left the madrasa around 9:45am locking all entrances of the educational institution, eyewitnesses said.

Police personnel were deployed in and around the madrasa premises as a tense situation was prevailing among students and teachers. Officials of the Dhaka deputy commissioner's office, led by Executive Magistrate Abdul Awal, entered the madrasa with police around 12:00pm. At that time, police prevented Administration sent a letter to the Dhaka deputy commissioner asking that the property of Jamia Rahmania Arabia Madrasa be handed over to the approved committee of the Waqf Estate.

Jamia Rahmania Arabia is one of the most famous Qawmi madrasas of the country. Established in 1986, the madrasa is registered with the waqf administration.

Azizul Haque, father of Mahfuzul and Mamunul, took control of the madrasa after the BNP-led four-party alliance came to power in 2001.

Since then, the Waqf Estate has been fighting a legal battle to regain management of the madrasa. They failed due to pressure from the BNPled four-party government despite the court verdict and the order of the waqf administration in favour of the waqf committee, insiders at the madrasa said. The government launched a crackdown against a section of Hefajat leaders, including Mamunul, following Hefajat's violent protest in March. Several hundred leaders, including many central ones, of Hefajat, were arrested. Amid the government pressure, Hefajat on April 25 dissolved its central committee. This month, a 33-member new committee of Hefajat was announced, dropping all leaders involved in the violent protests across the country in March. Mamunul and other leaders currently in jail for their alleged involvement in the violent activities were not given any post in the committee.
