ROAD TRANSPORT ACT 2018 Efforts for its weakening intensify

TUHIN SHUBHRA ADHIKARY

A government initiative to amend the Road Transport Act-2018 has picked up pace after a brief hiatus, even before the authorities started fully implementing the law.

An inter-ministerial meeting has been called today to discuss the opinions of different ministries, associations and citizens on a draft prepared for the amendment.

Giving in to the pressure from transport associations, the government is poised to make sweeping changes in the act, reducing different fines and sentences for traffic violation in 14 sections of the law. Individuals found guilty of overloading and illegally modifying vehicles will be able to secure bail once the amendment takes effect.

As per the draft, at least 29 of the 126 sections of the act will be amended.

With the secretary of the Road Transport and Highway Division in the chair, representatives of 23 ministries, divisions and government agencies, including cabinet division, have been asked to join today's online meeting, sources said.

On April 13 this year, the Road Transport and Bridges Ministry uploaded the draft for amendment on its official website, seeking public opinion. The draft was also sent to 15 or 16 ministries seeking their feedback.

Yousub Ali Mollah, additional secretary (estate), said some seven to eight ministries, workers' and other associations, and individual citizens have given their

Booster shots 'not a luxury'

Says WHO Europe head;
India's vaccine supply jumps

AGENCIES

A third-dose booster shot of the Covid-19 vaccination is a way to keep the most vulnerable safe and "not a luxury", the World Health Organization said yesterday.

The WHO said earlier this month data did not indicate a need for booster shots, while topping up already fully vaccinated people would further widen a vaccine-availability gap between rich and lower-income countries.

"A third dose of vaccine is not a luxury booster (that is) taken away from someone who is still waiting for a first jab. It's basically a way to keep the most vulnerable safe," Hans Kluge, head of WHO Europe, told a press briefing.

"We have to be a little bit careful with the booster shot, because there is not yet enough evidence," he said.

"But more and more studies show that a third dose keeps vulnerable people safe, and this is done by more and more countries in our region," he said.

Kluge urged European countries with excess vaccines to share them with other countries, particularly those in Eastern Europe and Africa.

VIRTUAL RECOGNITION GIVEN TO BANGLADESH MISSION: INDIRA
Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi told Bangladeshi refugees in Cooch Behar today that India was doing all it could do to promote the cause of the Bangladesh liberation struggle.

She pointed out that India had virtually recognised the Bangladesh diplomatic mission in Calcutta. She, therefore, did not understand why there was so much fuss over giving recognition to Bangladesh.

FAMINE FEARED IN BANGLADESH
The Telegraph (London) today reported that with an acute shortage of foodstuff already in parts of Bangladesh, a winter famine in isolated areas was inevitable. The recent severe floods had added to the dangers of famine. The rice crop from 2,600,000 acres had been lost. Many foreigners were deeply disturbed by the refusal of Lt Gen Tikka Khan, military governor of occupied Bangladesh, to allow food to be distributed by foreign voluntary organisations working under the United Nations, added the newspaper.

UK NEWSPAPERS' DISTRIBUTION IN PAKISTAN STOPPED
The British high commission in Rawalpindi announced that it had halted the distribution of all British newspapers and periodicals following a censorship move against foreign publication by the Pakistan government.

Pakistan had asked the commission to cease circulation of newspapers containing articles directed against Pakistan. A similar

Teen stalker confesses to murder

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Natore

An 18-year-old man confessed that he used to stalk girls in Singra and had killed a man for protesting his activities, police in Natore said yesterday.

Baijid Bostami and some of his cohorts frequently stalked girls in Anadanagar village, said Liton Kumar Saha, superintendent of police in Natore.

Eight months ago, local boatman Arju Sheikh and several other villagers protested the sexual harassment of a girl in the neighbourhood and assaulted Baijid and his friends, the officer told a press conference.

On Thursday, Baijid and two others hacked Arju with sharp weapons and threw him in Chalan Beel, tying his hands and legs together so that he drowns.

The SP said as the victim asked for mercy, they demanded Tk 10,000 from him.

Scientists bottle smell that scares bugs

MAIL ONLINE

Good news for the green-fingered! Plant pests like aphids could soon be scared off thanks to scientists who have managed to bottle the scent of predatory insects.

Researchers from the Pennsylvania State University have identified the specific chemicals which ladybirds give off that aphids can pick up on — and flee from.

The finding may provide an alternative to regular pesticides, to which many bugs are growing resistant, while eliminating the risk of

NORTHEAST INDIA Thousands threatened by floods

AFP, Guwahati

Flood waters rose across northeastern India yesterday, where hundreds of thousands of people are stranded on the roofs of their homes or have fled to higher ground as more torrential rain fell.

Incessant downpours for more than a week forced the Brahmaputra and other major rivers to burst their banks across Assam and Bihar states.

Up to two metres (6.6 feet) of water has submerged many villages. Experts say annual floods which hit the region are getting worse because of
