

'A reminder of DSCC's failure'

Jurain residents exhibit belongings of dengue affected people at protest

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

An empty can of condensed milk, stood beside a tea cup. A spoon, a toy. A t-shirt and a mug.

These and more lay in front of the speakers' table at a protest exhibit yesterday, organised by a group of Jurain residents, one of the areas hardest-hit by the ongoing dengue crisis.

They belonged to people from the area who were infected by the mosquito-borne viral disease. Some of them alive, some no longer so.

The exhibition was held near the Supreme Court area's Kodom Fountain.

The residents blamed Dhaka South City Corporations for their mishandling of the crisis and demanded the belongings be showcased in Dhaka Nagar Jadugar, as a reminder of the city corporation's failure.

Mijanur Rahman, a resident of the ward, said "Exhibiting the items in the museum will showcase the failure of the city corporation authorities to protect the city's people."

In the last three months, 20 people from Jurain's Ward-53 alone died from the virus.

The empty condensed milk can and tea cup belonged to deceased tea-seller Fatema, while the T-shirt and mug belonged to Bangla daily Prothom Alo staffer Abul Kalam Azad. The rest of them were collected from people who are currently suffering from dengue fever.

Palash Devnath, father of Alongkita (5) who is suffering from dengue, said DSCC thinks their responsibility is finished after fogging the streets, but they do nothing to take care of larvae breeding grounds inside houses.

"When I noticed larvae breeding inside our building, I notified the landlord. When he did not take any steps, I complained to the DSCC authorities. But they also didn't do anything to protect my daughter," he said.

"The ward councillor and authorities should work round the

On August 26, another cub was added to Chattogram Zoo's ever expanding tiger population. This little one, who met the media for the first time yesterday, was born to the albino tiger Shubhra -- daughter of the famous Raj-Pori duo -- and is the 10th cub born at the zoo. But this youngling is now faced with the common problem of breeding in captivity, where mommy tigers sometimes refuse to nurse their offspring. Zoo authorities are looking to mitigate this by feeding her goat milk.

Ruet suspends tree felling

Authorities find irregularities in project director's activities

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Rajshahi

Following protests from several quarters, the authorities of Rajshahi University of Engineering Technology (Ruet) suspended its ongoing tree-felling drive on the campus yesterday.

The authorities have also found that the development project -- under which the tree-felling was carried out -- was initiated without obtaining necessary permissions from the forest department.

The Ruet authorities came up with the decisions prompted by a report in The Daily Star and movement of local people, officials said.

"We didn't form any committee to investigate the matter as everything is happening before our eyes," Ruet registrar Md Selim Hossain told The Daily Star.

He said instead, top officials of Ruet summoned project director Amit Roy Chowdhury to the VC's office for queries.

"He was asked to produce necessary documents for the tree-felling, but failed to do so," the registrar said.

The project director only presented a copy of seeking permission from the Department of Environment dated March 15, 2020, but not any permission documents or evaluation report.

"Under these circumstances, we decided to stop felling the trees," the registrar said.

The officials then asked the project director to submit the necessary documents within three days.

Meanwhile, acting deputy director of DOE in Rajshahi Md Mizanur Rahman said, "Ruet never applied to us [seeking permission for tree-felling]. But even if they did, we would not have allowed them," he said.

PROPOSED DATA PROTECTION LAW May act as tool to control people's opinions: TIB

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Transparency International Bangladesh (TIB) yesterday said the proposed personal data protection law may act as a tool to control people's opinions and obstruct freedom of speech, instead of actually protecting personal information.

The organisation urged the government to formulate a progressive and time-befitting law to protect personal information in a transparent way, after seeking opinions from all stakeholders.

The law cannot hinder public opinion about the government's controversial activities, corruption and irregularities, it said.

In a statement, TIB Executive Director Dr Iftekharuzzaman said such laws have been formulated in many countries and unions, including the European Union. While the main spirit of such laws is to ensure privacy of people's personal information, the words "security" and "protection" have been used to repress the people.

Warnings during the formation of Digital Security Act, 2018 later became a reality, he said.

Iftekharuzzaman also said that a provision has reportedly been included in the proposed law which states people cannot approach courts for justice and redress. This cannot be a part of the law of any democratic country.

Zoom rolls out tons of new features including live translation

NAVEED HUSSAIN

Zoom announced several upcoming updates at its Zoomtopia conference on Monday, including the addition of live translation to its automatic live transcription feature and the expansion of its whiteboard feature into a more fully featured app.

Automatic live transcriptions and closed captions in English will be available in February 2021 for free Zoom accounts. Zoom now says it "plans to provide real-time transcription for (as many as 30 additional languages) by the end of next year."

As part of that push, Zoom will also offer translation services for paid accounts, with the goal of "supporting real-time translation across as many as 12 languages by the end of next year."

Zoom's whiteboard feature will also undergo significant changes. Zoom currently allows you to create and share whiteboards during meetings so that you can doodle together while you talk, but later this year, a planned expansion will make Zoom Whiteboard available outside of meetings in Zoom apps and on the web.

The basic drawing tools appear to be the same as what Zoom currently offers; the main difference is that Whiteboard is being treated as a product alongside video calls, rather than a feature within them. On your boards, you'll be able to add sticky notes, drawings, and comments, and you'll be able to view them at any time.

Zoom will also be available in Facebook's Horizon Workrooms early next year. According to Zoom, the shared VR meeting space will be able to host video meetings and connect to Zoom Whiteboard. You can pin a Zoom Whiteboard to your virtual desk or the wall for everyone to see in VR, and draw alongside colleagues at a meeting via a traditional computer.

Zoom is also expanding its communication platform with apps that complement its Phone Meetings, Chat, and Webinar offerings. Zoom apps have been integrated into meeting workflows to provide a more immersive experience.

Other inclusive and hybrid-specific solutions, such as Hot Desking and Zoom Rooms Smart Gallery, were also announced. Hot Desking, according to Zoom, will allow employees to reserve desks and spaces in offices, with an interactive map and simple authentication. Individual video feeds of in-room participants are created using AI in the Zoom Rooms Smart Gallery. This solution is unique in that it allows those who work remotely to feel included.

Zoomtopia added a slew of new features to the platform. Some of the new inclusive solutions, such as Rooms Smart Gallery and Horizon Workroom, are one-of-a-kind, but they may take some time to implement.
