back on the eyelid than a stye. Stye and chalazion may be related to blepharitis, a common problem that causes inflammation of the eyelids. A stye usually starts as a red and painful bump that looks like a pimple along the edge of the eyelid. As the stye grows, the eyelid becomes swollen and painful, and the eye may water. Most styes swell for about three days before they break open and drain. Styes usually heal in about a week.

A chalazion starts as a firm lump or cyst under the skin of the eyelid. Unlike stye, chalazion often doesn't hurt. It is caused by a clogged oil gland Chalazion grows more slowly than stye. If a chalazion grows big enough, it may affect one's vision. The inflammation and swelling may spread to the area surrounding the eye. Chalazion often goes away in a few months without treatment.

Home treatment is all that's needed for stye and chalazion in most cases. Apply warm, wet compresses for five to 10 minutes, three to six times a day, which usually helps the area heal faster and open a blocked pore so that it can drain. One should not use eye makeup or contact lenses until it is healed.

If a stye is not getting better with these home treatments, one must consult an ophthalmologist. The doctor may prescribe antibiotic eye ointment or eyedrops. S/he may need to prescribe antibiotic if the infection spreads to the eyelid or eye.

If a stye grows very large, the doctor may need to pierce (lance) it so it can drain and heal. Do not try to lance it yourself.

An ophthalmologist may recommend a steroid injection or surgery, if a chalazion stays long or gets worse

To avoid stye or chalazion, we have to incorporate some practices. Don't rub eyes. This can irritate your eves and let in bacteria. If you need to touch your eyes, wash your hands first. Protect your eyes from dust and air pollution. Remove eye makeup properly every time. Replace eye cosmetics, especially mascara, at least once every six months. Bacteria can grow in cosmetics if they get old. If you get stye or chalazion often, wash your eyelids regularly with a bit of baby shampoo mixed in warm water.

Chhatri Sangha -- a revolutionary student group formed by Leela. She was a social reformer and advocate of women's rights and education.

Locals said Leela's house -- in Panchgaon village of Moulvibazar's Rajnagar upazila -- existed even two and a half months ago. But they could not comprehend as to how a house of such a historic significance disappeared suddenly despite a High Court injunction that prohibits anyone from demolishing or removing it or undertaking any construction work on it.

Aklu Mia Chowdhury, president of Leela Nag Smriti Parishad, confirmed that the house was there two to three months ago.

Leela was the founder editor of "Jayasree" -- a Bangla monthly women's magazine, he said, adding that the house should be reconstructed so it becomes a centre of education, literature and culture for future generations in the upazila.

According to retired teacher Indrajit Deb, general secretary of the Parishad, Leela's ancestral home included a bungalow, a pond and a school -founded by her mother Kunjalata Nag in 1938 -- on 5.97 acres of land. The school, Kunjalata Government Primary School, was nationalised a while back.

During the Pakistan rule in 1967, after Leela's family had moved to India, one Alauddin Chowdhury emigrated from Assam's Karimganj and occupied the house, he added.

According to researchers and local freedom fighters, Alauddin collaborated with the Pakistan ancestral house "had collapsed some

In July 2018, the tribunal sentenced four people to death in connection with the massacre, but Alauddin's name was not mentioned in the charges as he died before the start of the investigation in October 2014, he

On September 9, 2019, this paper ran a report on the state of the house, headlined "A house that could have been a museum", along with a photo of the brick bungalow with its clay tiled roof extended on the front porch, supported by iron columns.

But during a recent visit this year, nothing but the vaguely recognisable elevated brick foundation of the house was found at the site. Asked about Munim's whereabouts, his mother Shamsunnahar Chowdhury said he was not home at the time.

Bijit Dev, member of Leela Nag Smriti Pathagar, said as there is no iron column or debris piled up at the site of the house, it is apparent that a storm did not blow it away; rather, people with bad intentions must have dismantled and removed the signs of the bungalow.

Prof Robaet Ferdous of mass communication and journalism department at DU said Leela is a part of the glorious history of the university, from where thousands of women graduate every year and make their mark in different fields at home and

The DU teachers and students are saddened to learn that family of a Razakar in Moulvibazar has been occupying Leela's ancestral home, and they demand the occupants be evicted and the historic house be restored and preserved, he added.

According to the website of Jayasree Patrika, published from Kolkata in India, before getting her Master of Arts degree in English from Dhaka University in 1923, Leela graduated from Bethune College in Kolkata and was awarded Padmavati Gold Medal and a cash prize of Rs 100 for securing first position among girl students. Earlier in 1917, she completed her entrance examination with scholarship from Eden High School in Dhaka.

DHAKA SATURDAY SEPTEMBER 25, 2021, ASHWIN 10, 1428 BS

On Tuesday, one Akash Ghosh filed a case with the Narayanganj Chief Judicial Magistrate's Court.

Taking the case into cognisance, the court directed Police Bureau of Investigation to probe the matter and submit a report by December 21.

Meanwhile, Hindu Ain Poriborton Protirodh Sommilito Parishad at a press conference at the Dhaka Reporters Unity yesterday protested the move to amend the law.

The Samajik Protirodh Committee the press release, signed by Bangladesh Mahila Parishad President Fauzia Moslem, said conscious rights organisations have been working for years with the government in formulating drafts of acts to establish equal rights to inherited properties for both men and women in line with the constitution and human rights.

"It is not the first time that women and development organisations have taken initiatives to bring amendments to an act. The Law Commission has also submitted a proposal to bring amendment to the Hindu Act," said the press release.

"We believe it [filing of the case against Shaheen Anam and Angela Gomes] is an attempt to create communal chaos in the country. The initiative [revising law] has been taken by some organisations...

"The draft is prepared upon the demand of civil society and women. No individual has taken the initiative," it added.

The case has been lodged at a time when Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, at the UN General Assembly (UNGA), has placed emphasis on building a network of women leaders globally to ensure gender equity.

Some people of the Hindu community are not only harassing individuals but have also been trying to fuel communal incitement for a long time, the press release said.

Establishing equal rights to inherited property has long been a demand of women organisations, and conscious citizens, including eminent lawyers, have been expressing solidarity with the demand, it said.

"We believe that the act of opposing the amendment of inheritance law is anti-constitutional," reads the release.

It added that while the government is taking various steps to empower women, ensure human rights, expressing their thoughts on amending family law, and while Bangladesh is regarded as a global role model for women empowerment with women playing courageous, productive and responsible roles, such negative attitude towards equal rights of women is reflective of religious fundamentalism.

The 67 organisations that Protirodh Samajik constitute Committee are: Bangladesh Mahila Parishad, Ain o Salish Kendra, Steps Towards Development, Bangladesh Nari Progoti Sangha, Brac, Women for Women, Care Bangladesh, Karmajibi Nari, Jatiya Sramik Jote, Concern Mahila Ainjibi Samity, Nijera Kori, Manusher Jonno Foundation, Dhaka Awaj Foundation, Prip Trust, ADD number in half by 2025.

Meanwhile, speakers at a views exchange meeting in Mymensingh yesterday said ensuring the desired rights to women of religious minorities is the demand of the times.

A community cannot progress without ensuring proper rights to its women, said speakers at the meeting held at Durgabari Puja Mondop in Mymensingh city, reports our Mymensingh correspondent.

Bangladesh Mohila Parishad organised the meeting titled "Inheritance of Religious Minority Women". Ex-lawmaker Chhabi Biswas was the chief guest.

President of Bangladesh Mohila Oikya Parishad Supriya Bhattacharya, Secretary of the parishad Dipali Chakraborty, its Vice-president Geeta Biswas, President of its Mymensingh chapter Shila Sen, Secretary Sheuly Rani Biswas and Pulok Ghatak, secretary of Hindu Ain Sanskar Bastabayan Parishad, also spoke on the occasion, among others.

Demanding reforms of laws that are discriminatory towards minority women, the speakers said minority women throughout the country would be aware about their rights to include them in a spontaneous movement.

In traditional Hindu law, there is no hurdle to inheritance rights of women but a vested quarter has been opposing it, they said. That vested quarter is now attacking people who support the inheritance rights of Hindu women, they also alleged.
