

Desperation over ACCOMMODATION

RU admission seekers struggle to find a place to stay as exams start

ANWAR ALI with ARAFAAT RAHAMAN

As feared, many admission seekers of Rajshahi University (RU) and their guardians were desperate to find a place to stay yesterday, and the situation was exacerbated by unusually high accommodation rents in the city.

RU authorities began holding its three-day honours admission tests yesterday, keeping students' residential halls, bar the women's dorms, closed. Some 1.28 lakh students are sitting for the tests, which will be held till October 6.

Many admission seekers and their guardians said they had to sleep under the open sky, after finding no place to stay. Some were seen passing the night on footpaths, and some stayed inside the buses by which they came to Rajshahi.

Rents for seats (dormitory accommodation) soared. A seat that used to go for Tk 1,200 per month was rented out for at least Tk 3,000 per night.

"I was roaming around the train station, planning to spend the night there. Finally, a person offered me a room to stay along with six other admission seekers," said admission-seeker Naim Hasan from Dhaka.

Khalilur Rahman, a resident of Dhaka, said he managed a seat at a private hostel for himself and his son for two nights, spending Tk 6,000.

Ahmed Ibrahim of Patuakhali, who went to Rajshahi with his son and daughter for the tests, said, "I managed a seat for my daughter at the women's hall, but found no place for my son and I."

Later, a stranger arranged the night's stay for Ibrahim's son at his home, and the admission seeker had to stay in the veranda.

Many Rajshahi residents, RU's teachers and students, and local politicians hosted the admission seekers at their houses.

Mohammad Shahriar Alam, state minister for foreign affairs, said his parents and sister made arrangements for 12 students and their guardians to stay at their homes. "We do this every year. It has become a tradition for the people of Rajshahi," he said.

Asaduzzaman Asad, former district secretary of Awami League, said 17 students were staying with him at his home.

Amid this situation, RU Vice Chancellor Prof Golam Sabbir Sattar announced that they will consider holding tests in all divisions from next year.

"We will discuss holding the admission tests either in all divisions or in clusters with other universities," he said while observing the tests on campus yesterday.

He, however, said the decision depends on a series of discussions with university academic councils and government officials.

Regarding accommodation for girls, RU Provoosts' Council Convenor Prof Md Ekram Hossain said the women's dorms housed some 600 girls and their guardians on Sunday night.

The dorms, which have a capacity for taking in 3,000 people, were set to accommodate some 2,500 yesterday night. Meanwhile, claims of charging extra fares were raised against drivers of auto-rickshaws and human hauliers. Students said auto-rickshaw drivers charged them Tk 30 to Tk 50, when the usual fare is Tk 10.

Due to the inflow of so many people, there were major traffic jams at different intersections. Auto-rickshaw driver Hafizur Rahman said they charge higher during admission tests, as traffic jams during the period reduce their income.

Rajshahi Metropolitan Police Commissioner Abu Kalam Siddique said they ensured security for the visitors, and will take steps if anyone charges higher for anything.

Many admission seekers and their guardians have taken up abode at the city's Kazla Gate Masjid, after finding no other suitable accommodation. Meanwhile, the RU premises were buzzing with people from across the country yesterday, inset.

A day before the Dhaka University halls reopen, Covid-19 vaccination drive for the university teachers, students, officials and employees began on the campus yesterday.

The vaccination programme is being held at a temporary set-up at the Martyred Intellectual Dr Muhammad Murtaza Medical Centre. It is slated to continue till October 17.

Earlier around 9:30am yesterday, Vice-Chancellor Professor Md Akhtaruzzaman inaugurated the campaign. He said they took the initiative so that students can get vaccinated within a short period of time.

"We will be able to resume normal operations as soon as all students get vaccinated," he said.

Speaking at the inauguration, Dhaka district Civil Surgeon Abu Hussain Md Moinul Ahsan said, "We don't usually allow setting up vaccination centres outside of hospitals or government organisations, but we've permitted this centre with highest priority."

According to an official of the university's ICT cell, around 23,000 of the total 47,000 students have received at least the first dose of Covid-19 vaccines, meaning around 49 percent students have been vaccinated.

DORMS TO REOPEN TODAY

The vaccination drive comes ahead of the decision to reopen the university's halls today after 18 months, albeit at a limited scale—only for honours final year and masters' students.

According to a recent decision of the provost standing committee, only honours final year and masters' students who will be able to produce their vaccine certificates or have received at least the first dose will be allowed to enter the residential halls.

Speakers at a commemorative event yesterday recalled the nation-building contributions of celebrated journalist Khandaker Muniruzzaman, highlighting that he was a progressive mind who upheld progressive ideals, secular politics and freedom of speech.

Muniruzzaman's activism was not limited to journalism only -- he was also actively involved in various labour movements and worked for oppressed and marginalised communities, they said.

He also played a significant role in different movements in the country, said speakers at the launch of "Jibon Nibedito Muktir Sangramey: Muniruzzaman Smarak Grantha" -- a book commemorating the contributions of the noted

The event was organised by the book's editorial team.

Muniruzzaman (71) passed away on November 24 last year. He was serving as the acting editor of the Daily Sangbad at the time of his demise.

"Muniruzzaman is the name of a 'true human warrior' of our time," said Bangla Academy Director General and noted poet Mohammad Nurul Huda.

Addressing the discussion as chief guest, Nurul Huda said Muniruzzaman made significant contributions to different struggles of the country's liberation movement in the 1960s and the Liberation War of 1971.

'An oppressive tool to control women'

Khushi Kabir on fatwas

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

In order to stay in power, political parties try and appease religious sentiments, observed rights activist Khushi Kabir yesterday.

"The government lacks the will to question religious organisations even though they claim that they are trying to do everything to reduce gender discrepancies, the religious card is essential for politicians to stay in power," said Kabir, honorary coordinator and adviser to Sangat, and coordinator of Nijera Kori.

She made these observations at eShe magazine's South Asia Union Summit Led by Women in a panel titled "Doctrine of Oppression: The Gendered Cost of Religious Extremism".

Referring to how Qawmi madrasas are funded by the government, she said, "Despite the fact that they are not transparent about their curriculum and don't allow the government to have a say in what they teach, passouts from these madrasas are treated as equivalent to having a Master's degree. When bloggers, free-thinkers or rationalists try to raise voices about this, the government supports religious extremists by arresting those raising their voices."
