African Union suspends Sudan

It is of course correct that COP26 is both unbelievably important for our planet but also very difficult, and it's in the balance. And every day as I talk to international leaders, we hear further commitments. ... Whether it is enough, l'm afraid it is too early to say.

BRITISH PRIME MINISTER BORIS JOHNSON World Bank freezes aid; security forces launch sweeping arrests of anti-coup protesters AFP, Khartoum Sudanese security forces launched sweeping arrests of anti-coup protesters yesterday, tightening the regime's grip while the international community ramped up punitive measures.

The World Bank froze aid and the African Union suspended the East African country over this week's military takeover.

Armed forces deployed in large numbers after overnight protests saw clashes in the capital Khartoum, when officers fired tear gas and arrested several leading pro-democracy activists, including from Sudan's largest political party, the Umma Party.

"Police forces have removed all the barricades since Wednesday [yesterday] morning and arrested all the people who stood near them," said Hady Bashir, a protester, after AFP correspondents saw security forces clear rocks and tyres blocking major streets in Khartoum.

Beyond the capital, protesters have stood their ground to decry the country's latest military coup, setting up blockades in Port Sudan in the east, Wad Madani to the south, and Atbara to the north.

"Sporadic protests erupt every now movements ratcheted up calls for and then demanding the government's said Osama Ahmed, a return," witness from Wad Madani, about 186 kilometres (115 miles) south of Khartoum

Since top General Abdel Fattah al-Burhan on Monday announced the dissolution of the government and declared a state of emergency, thousands of citizens have maintained protests, chanting "No to military rule". Shops have remained closed following calls for a campaign of civil disobedience, and pro-democracy

"million-strong protests" on Saturday. Yesterday, the AU called the military takeover in Sudan "unconstitutional" and suspended its membership within the continent wide bloc.

The World Bank later suspended aid to the East African country over the coup.

Analysts had warned that the putsch could put at risk much-needed international assistance unlocked under Hamdok's government to rescue Sudan's economy, battered by decades of US sanctions and by mismanagement.

The blows came after Burhan allowed home Prime Minister Abdalla Hamdok -- who was detained by the military on Monday along with his ministers and civilian members of Sudan's ruling council -- following
