PBI to probe case against Meghdol

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

A Dhaka court has directed the Police Bureau of Investigation to probe into a case filed against seven members of popular band Meghdol.

The case was filed after they recently performed a song called 'Om' at a concert against the recent communal violence. The song has allegedly "hurt religious sentiment".

The seven Meghdol members are Shibu Kumar Shill (vocal), Mezbaur Rahman Sumon (vocal), Rasheed Sharif Shoaib (guitar-vocal), MG Kibria (bass guitar), Amzad Hossain (drums), Tanvir Dawud Rony (keyboard) and Saurav Sarkar (flute).

The court of Metropolitan Magistrate Mainul Islam passed the order on Sunday after Advocate Imrul Hasan filed the case with the court on October 28.

The case was filed under sections 295 (A) and 109 of the Penal Code, court sources said.

The magistrate then took cognisance of the case and recorded the complainant's statements.

ASSESSING ROHINGYA NEEDS UN visit begins in Bhasan Char

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

A UN team yesterday began a four-day visit to Bhasan Char for needs assessment before starting humanitarian assistance to the Rohingyas in the island.

The joint needs assessment mission, comprising officials of the UN Refugee Agency and World Food Programme, will look into the needs of the 18,000 plus Rohingyas.

The development comes following the signing of an MoU on October 9 between the Ministry of Relief and Disaster Management and the UNHCR to establish a common protection and policy framework for humanitarian response to the Rohingyas in Bhasan Char.

"This will also help evaluate what will be the needs of the one lakh Rohingyas once they are relocated to Bhasan Char from Cox's Bazar," a UN official told this correspondent yesterday.

During the four-day visit, the UN mission will also assess the logistical needs of the UN and other international agencies once they begin their operations in the island, under Noakhali, where Bangladesh Navy built a housing facility to ease the congestion and other challenges in Cox's Bazar Rohingya camps.

About a million Rohingyas live in the Cox's Bazar camps and more than 7 lakh of them had fled a military crackdown in Rakhine State of Myanmar in 2017.

Scientists uncover secret of giant panda colours

INDEPENDENT.CO.UK

The secret of precisely why giant pandas are coloured black and white has been uncovered by a team of scientists from Britain, China and Finland, a question that has puzzled experts for generations.

While the bears' distinctive high-contrast colouring means they stand out in the unnatural surroundings of a city zoo, where most humans encounter them, the opposing shades of their fur actually plays a counterintuitive but crucial defensive role in the mountain forests where they would normally reside, the new study found.

"The giant panda uses black-and-white pelage as a form of crypsis to avoid detection in its natural habitat," the scientists from the University of Bristol, the Chinese Academy of Sciences and the University of Jyväskylä wrote in the academic journal Scientific Reports, concluding that the combined extremes allow them to camouflage themselves more effectively against different
