STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Eighty-three percent of the 225 Digital Security Act cases lodged between January and November this year were filed over social media posts and individuals' online expressions.

The platforms people were prosecuted for using include Facebook, YouTube, TikTok and Likee.

This is according to data by Article 19, a UK-based human rights body that focuses on freedom of expression.

Individuals affiliated with the ruling party filed 40 percent of these cases, making them a majority of the users of the law.

Similarly, 40 percent of the cases were filed against people for allegedly criticising the prime minister, ministers, members of parliament, and affiliates of the ruling party.

Zeesan running show here with condemned inmate

Says DB about godfather in exile

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Hiding in Dubai, top criminal Zeesan Ahmed is running his extortion racket in Dhaka through regular communications with a death-row convict in Kashimpur jail.

DB officials said this based on information gleaned from several members of the racket arrested in the capital.

The arrests were made after a trader named Shahidul Islam Tutul filed a general dairy with Badda Police Station in which he said he was being threatened by the racket for extortion money, they said.

The officials also said Shahidul was targeted after Zeesan contacted convict Mamun over the phone and told him that he needed money. At this, Mamun instructed his goons to collect the money through extortion. The goons then picked Shahidul as their target and demanded Tk 5 lakh from him. They first called Shahidul over the phone on November 19 and told him that his family would be attacked if he did not pay them the money.

The Daily Star has obtained an audio clip allegedly with that conversation. "Your every step is being followed by our boys. Talk with us with the money in your hand, or else they know what they need to do," the caller is heard saying these chilling words.

Two days later, two to three youths stormed Shahidul's house, fired shots in the ceiling and fled.

Shahidul then filed the GD over the matter.

While investigating the complaint, DB police (Gulshan Division) arrested seven people in Badda of the capital and Bandarban on Sunday over their involvement in the extortion attempt.

Detectives claimed that the arrestees are associates of top criminal
