'ASTHA' made grassroots people aware: speakers

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Multi-sectoral project ASTHA has been able to reach a majority of people through digital messaging to raise awareness about gender-based violence amid the spike in number of such incidents during the Covid-19 lockdown.

The initiative implemented virtual communication technologies, with 21,504 messages broadcast via mobile phones, and 54 awareness movies broadcast via local-cable network and 182 community-awareness microphones.

The information was disseminated yesterday at an event organised in the capital's Gulshan.

It was implemented by Ain o Salish Kendra (ASK), in coordination with Ministry of Women and Children Affairs. The project has been implemented in 102 unions under 12 upazilas of Jamalpur, Patuakhali, Bogura and Cox's Bazar.

"ASTHA has taken these small components to the grassroots and rightly addressed them," said Law and Justice Division Joint Secretary Ummey Kulsum.

Dr Eiko Narita, country representative of UNFPA; Golam Monowar Kamal, executive director of ASK; Rumana Khan of UNFPA Bangladesh; and Anne van Leeuwen, ambassador at the Netherlands embassy, spoke at the event.
