

Silence is SUSTainable education: VC

“Don’t argue with your teachers even if they provoke you or misbehave. What in fact do you mean by misbehave? If teachers are doing it, it can’t be misbehaviour, it’s just behaviour.”

MAHBUB ALAM MUNNA

“If silence can be the sign of consent, why shouldn’t it be the sign of sustainable education?” the spokesperson of VC, a group of meritorious students popularly known as Valo Chatra, asked during a press conference.

“You should keep silent in every matter even if you are beaten or oppressed. If we can spread this silent message to every nook and corner of the country, our education system will thrive. That’s how we can achieve Sustainable Development Goals by ensuring SUSTainable education for all,” VC insisted.

It has become an annoying reality that students of Chapasthan start a movement whenever they stumble across any issue. As a result, classes get cancelled and students are deprived of getting proper education, said VC members.

“It’s bewildering that students are harming themselves in the name of protests and movements where they can easily avoid these disadvantages just by being silent. Why do they always need to raise voice against injustice and disparity when he or she could easily just let the matter go by being silent? In this manner, students are moving awa from actual sustainable education. No wonder education in this country is in such a sorry state.

“Don’t argue with your teachers even if they provoke you or misbehave. What in fact do you mean by misbehave? If teachers are doing it, it can’t be misbehaviour, it’s just behaviour. Their behaviour represents their good judgement and your silence represents your education. The more you are silent, the better the education you will receive,” the VC spokesperson thus advised students on how they too could be a part of VC someday.

Due to this ill advised movement and protest, some students were seen roaming around at night in campus for absolutely no purpose. That surely went directly against Chapasthan’s culture, name, fame, etc. Economists fear Chapasthan may face a sharp deterioration in GDP growth because of this heinous frequentation of female students at night.

The Valo Chatra group couldn’t hold back their powerful words after seeing such a sinful deed, the spokesperson said. “You are not a nocturnal animal, are you? Then why are you roaming around at night? Don’t you want to get married?

Who will marry such a nocturnal animal, I mean, female?” the VC spokesperson asked.

“What a diminution of the education system! Some are protesting at night and others are walking to and fro, supposedly protesting. Who is actually studying?” the VC spokesperson continued asking.

“How will this country be developed if we spend our time by protesting instead of studying?”

Indeed, such students have been leaving signs of their stupidity from time immemorial. Standing with a placard in hand and delivering some unwholesome slogans cannot be the duty of students. Their one and only focus should be on practising how to keep silent after tolerating nationwide injustice, discrimination, oppression, violence, obscenities, misbehaviour towards students and thus becoming a part of sustainable and continuing education.

Apple to introduce new idiot emoji

COVID CORRESPONDENT

A local man has won a competition to be the inspiration for the new “#Covidiot” emoji to be introduced soon by Apple.

The emoji contest was held worldwide with people tweeting, Instagramming, and Facebooking pictures of themselves wearing masks to Apple under the hashtag “maskup”.

“We didn’t tell people what the emoji was supposed to be, because we wanted authenticity,” said Jim Shook, CEO of Apple. “And it worked, we got some real idiots in the contest. We need this emoji because our users want to express themselves in their own way, within the strict parameters we provide them, of course. This year the emoji is free, but they won’t be able to use it from next year unless they pay for it.”

“I am very responsible, I always wear a mask, even when I am sleeping. People say it is hard to breathe while wearing masks, but I never faced any problems.”

The Chapasthani man in question, with the Twitter handle Mukh Ushpori, tweeted a picture of himself with his mask on below his nose.

When contacted after his victory, he said, “I am very responsible, I always wear a mask, even when I am sleeping. People say it is hard to breathe while wearing masks, but I never faced any problems.”

He narrowly beat out two candidates from Russia and the US. The Russian woman had the mask around her chin, while it is understood that the US man’s photo was sent in by one of his employees, who snapped a photo of her boss shouting at everyone to wear a mask while he was maskless.

“I don’t know why they were even considered,” wondered Mukh Ushpori. “One wasn’t even wearing a mask and the other was wearing it around her chin -- that’s not the proper way to win a contest.”

At this point, he was shown a picture of his winning post released by Apple, with #Covidiot written beside the image.

“Wait, what was the contest for? I thought it was #maskup...” he said, then opened his mask, sneezed, coughed and put it back on.

CEO gets cash reward for restarting work from home during Covid surge

THE RICHES REPORT

“The money you make is a symbol of the value you create, Idowu Koyenikan had written, and I did just that by ensuring people get to work from home during the surge of this new Covid variant. I valued people’s lives and that earned me cash recognition and general recognition of course.”

These were the words of inspiration Dr Rognai Bahadur had to say when asked to share his thoughts after receiving a cash reward for allowing his company’s employees to work from home during the current surge.

Dr Rognai’s company is one of the leading corporations of the nation and just when the positivity rate started climbing, he decided to allow Work from Home.

“Despite growing number of cases, we had initially decided to keep our offices open because we are basically like a family and its important that we see each other regularly despite being unable to get along. That’s the value of a family,” said Dr Rognai while recounting how he came to the decision of WFH.

“I also told my esteemed colleagues that all we had to do was be careful and we would survive this. But when more and more of my colleagues started showing symptoms and wanted to use the office’s medical insurance to get tested, I decided something needed to change.

“That is when I decided WFH needed to come back. Every family needs a break and we ended up saving a lot of money -- from medical insurance to office maintenance bills. And that is

“But when more and more of my colleagues started showing symptoms and wanted to use the office’s medical insurance to get tested, I decided something needed to change.”

how I ended up donating a bunch of money to the brand that arranges these awards,” said a smiling Dr Rognai.

Dr Rognai is just one of many CEOs who have been recognised for their shrewd ability to make money while pretending to care for people.

To know more about the awards ceremony, tune in to Dr Rognai’s podcast which will air sometime soon.

PHOTO: AFP