

Samina, mother of a son and a daughter, worked as a medical officer at Bangabandhu Memorial Hospital, said her niece Nanziba.

Documents of seized vehicles will also be delivered from the service centre.

Capital Press stands as a worn-down establishment at the old town's Begumbazar, bearing the stories of the glorious and tumultuous times of the Language Movement.

The Language Movement did not just come to be. Behind the historic movement, that brought about a turn of events for Bangladesh, are a million stories – of people, of premises, of places. In this 10-part series, we explore some of the places and premises vital to the movement. Establishments that we've lost to time, buildings that today bear no sign of the glories they once played host to. For part six, we take you to Capital Press and Pioneer Press, the major publishing presses for the movement.

Sharif Jainil, general secretary of Bapa, said in the last few years, many small and big industries have sprung up in the vast areas of Madhabpur and Sadar upazilas of Habiganj. Industrial wastes from those are causing serious environmental pollution.

"It took time to communicate with the immigration officials of both countries and suddenly the pandemic struck," said Sujana. He said the Bangladesh high commission completed formalities for Liton's return last week but it still was not easy. Sujana said they somehow convinced him to accompany them to the Sutarkandi border, where Liton's family received him.

Milon, identified him in the presence of security forces from the two countries before deportation. She said three years back, someone showed her a video of her son in India when they had lost all hope. Sujan said, "It felt like the movie 'Bajrangi Bhaijaan' when so many people through social media got involved and we finally managed to send the person back."

A video of the reunion went viral on social media. He recognised his mother but did not call her "Ma" and instead addressed her as his mother-in-law. He referred to his brother as a friend. The family is seen in the video laughing over it.
