

3 held with 117 stolen phones in port city

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Police claimed to have arrested three persons, including the ringleader of a gang that changes IMEI of stolen mobile phones, during a drive in the port city's Riazuddin Bazar area early yesterday.

IMEI, international mobile equipment identity, is a unique number that identifies every phone. It can be used to trace lost or stolen devices.

The arrestees are Md Sazzad (20), Md Habibullah Mizbah (25) and Md Rashed (20), said law enforcers.

Police raided the mobile shops "Innovative Phone Care" at CDA Royal Market and "Chowdhury Dot Com" on Tamakundi Lane, and seized 117 stolen mobile phones, Sub-Inspector (SI) Mominul Hasan of Kotwali Police Station, told The Daily Star.

Police first detained Sazzad in front of Chattogram Railway Station for suspicious movement, and after getting leads from him, managed to arrest the others.

SI Mominul said using software, the gang changed the IMEI of stolen phones in 10 to 20 seconds, and later, sent them to different shops for resale.

A case has been lodged with Kotwali Police Station in this regard.

Under Ashrayan-2 project, 29 Manta families were given their very own homes. Each house has two rooms, a kitchen, toilet and veranda. Earlier, the families used to live on boats, as per their tradition, but that lifestyle came with several compromises, according to them.

‘Boat people’ now safe ashore
Manta community members get homes under Ashrayan project

BSS, Patuakhali

The Manta community, whose life revolves around boats and fishing, did not have a postal address for as long as anyone can remember, until now. Thanks to the government's Ashrayan project, the community members now have places they can call their home.

For over a century, the small community that roams around on boats in the southwestern part of Patuakhali thought that it was their fate to live on boats, from birth to death.

Despite their way of life, the need for permanent addresses to establish their constitutional rights was growing. To ensure that, the government incorporated the community in the nationwide campaign to provide addresses to landless people under Ashrayan-2 project.

"The government initially rehabilitated 29 Manta families... First they were given national ID [cards], recognising them as citizens. And then, they were given the houses, built under the Ashrayan project," said Rangabali UNO Mashfakur Rahman.

Social and anthropological studies suggest that although lives of the Mantas have been traditionally this way, many were actually forced to adopt this life, as they were victims of river erosion decades ago.

"I was born on a boat 70 years ago, since my grandfather had to lead this life due to erosion," said Amir Ali Sardar.

Sardar, one of the beneficiaries of the housing project, got married on a boat, and his three children were born and grew up on the boat as well.

"It's hard to live on a boat with family members, especially children. The children fall into the river... many drown like this."

Sardar is now living in a concrete made, two-room house with a kitchen, toilet and veranda on two decimals of land, entirely under his legal possession.

The 29 Manta homes also have electric lines, under a separate government campaign of bringing the whole country under electrification coverage.

Julekha Begum (35), Pakhi Akter (25), Minara Begum (45) and Rokeya Begum (35), who had been leading similar lives since their birth, have also been rehabilitated on the char land (shoal).

"My father, grandfather and I were born on boats. We were also married off on boats, while my grandfather and father died on boats," said Julekha.

Twenty-nine families of the community got their home, while houses are being constructed to rehabilitate 31 more on the char Mantaz, under the project's third phase.
