UK inflation hits 40-year high of 9pc

REUTERS, London

British inflation surged last month to its highest annual rate since 1982, pressuring finance minister Rishi Sunak to offer more help for households and the Bank of England to keep raising interest rates despite a risk of recession.

Consumer price inflation hit 9 per cent in April, the Office for National Statistics said on Wednesday, surpassing the peaks of the early 1990s recession that many Britons remember for sky-high interest rates and widespread mortgage defaults.

Britain has the highest inflation of Europe's big economies and almost certainly in the Group of Seven, with Canada and Japan yet to report April data. Neither are likely to match Britain's price growth which also looks set to be longer-lasting.

Last month, the International Monetary Fund forecast Britain in 2023 faced slower economic growth and more persistent inflation than any other major economy.

Soaring energy bills were the biggest inflation driver, reflecting April's increase in regulated energy tariffs. Knock-on effects from Russia's invasion of Ukraine mean those bills are likely to jump again in October.

"We cannot protect people completely from these global challenges but are providing significant support where we can, and stand ready to take further action," Sunak said.

A Reuters poll of economists had pointed to a reading of 9.1 per cent, up from 7.0 per cent in March, and sterling fell.

Households face the biggest cost-of-living squeeze since records began in the 1950s, Britain's budget forecasters say, and consumer confidence has sunk towards all-time lows.

Anti-poverty campaigners urged Sunak to act now, starting with an immediate increase in welfare benefits.

"(Sunak's) inaction will make an already desperate situation for many even worse," Rebecca McDonald, senior economist at the Joseph Rowntree Foundation which campaigns for lower-income households, said.

A survey on Tuesday showed two in three people had kept their heating off when they would normally have turned it on, almost half were driving less or changing supermarkets and just over a quarter say they have skipped meals.

Food prices rose by nearly 7 per cent in the 12 months to April, the ONS said.

On Monday, BoE Governor Andrew Bailey told lawmakers food price rises were a major worry as he apologised for "being apocalyptic for a moment".

While the government points to its 22 billion pound ($27.4 billion) package of support for households so far, much of this is cancelled out by recent tax increases on workers.

The Times newspaper said Sunak was drawing up plans to cut taxes and increase home heating benefits by hundreds of pounds.

An increase in prices charged by restaurants and cafes, as value-added tax rates went back to their pre-pandemic levels in April, added to the inflation jump last month.

The BoE this month forecast inflation would top 10 per cent later this year and investors expect the central bank will add to the four interest rate increases it has implemented since December, taking its Bank Rate to 1 per cent, the highest since 2009.

Bank of America this week criticised the BoE for not being clear about its response, potentially leaving it vulnerable to political attacks and the economy in a worse situation.

"The BoE reaction function has become less transparent and monetary policy more at risk of perceived politicisation," it said in a report. "As a result inflation expectations may be less anchored so we expect higher interest rate, growth and inflation volatility."

A former Conservative defence minister, Liam Fox, last week accused the BoE of failing to spot the inflation surge coming and the Sunday Telegraph newspaper reported that current ministers, whom it did not name, were also critical.

However, he then informed that members are still not taking the scheduled fees from their clients.

"We even directed our members to make sure that the companies don't see the fee as a burden," Hossain said.

ICAB, which began its journey back in 1973, has around 160 firms while the country has around 30,000 professionals who have completed a chartered accountancy course.

Over the last five decades, the institute developed around 2,200 chartered accountants. Of them, 1,700 to 1,800 are now still in the country.

"Our chartered accountants are of international standard. As a result, they get appreciation from Canada, Australia and many other parts of the world," he added.

Sri Lanka to default

Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe said on Wednesday the country had secured $160 million in bridge financing from the World Bank, but it was not clear if the funds could be used for fuel payments.

"The statistics have gone haywire," he said. "But the reality is we don't even have $1 million." Hit hard by the pandemic, rising oil prices and populist tax cuts, Sri Lanka's dire economic situation has led to spiralling inflation and shortages of essential supplies, bringing thousands of onto the streets in protest.

Violence between pro- and anti-government factions and police left nine dead and more than 300 injured last week, and was followed by the resignation of former prime minister Mahinda Rajapaksa.

India's heatwave

Power demand has also hit a record high as India registered its hottest March in more than a century and an unusually hot April.

"Because of the (Covid-19 related) issues in China, it is taking longer for supplies to reach," Braganza said.

"As a result, and with a surge in demand, we've seen that energy-efficient conditioners are what are in short supply."

Braganza, whose association members include Voltas Ltd, Whirlpool of India Ltd and Havells India Ltd, said deliveries of parts from China are now taking 60-90 days, up from 45 days normally.

Indian companies depend on China for 10 per cent to 20 per cent of AC components like compressors and controllers. Energy-efficient AC sales would mostly be affected because other products largely use locally made components, Braganza said.
