HIKING RICE PRICES

Hoarders of every hue in it

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Hoarding by small traders as well as large business groups has been causing rice prices to soar, giving lowincome people a hard time.

From large corporate groups to brick kilns owners to primary school teachers, people are hoarding rice, Food Minister Sadhan Chandra Majumder told reporters at his office yesterday

"We've intelligence reports that the big corporate groups are hoarding excessive amounts of rice violating the rules," Sadhan said.

He told The Daily Star last night that the government had launched a drive across the country to check whether the intelligence report was right.

Rice prices have risen by Tk 8-10 a kg over the last two weeks even though it is the Boro harvest season and there is an ample supply of paddy.

According to the Trading Corporation of Bangladesh, the prices of coarse and fine rice increased by $5.\overline{38}$ percent and 3.17 percent in just a week.

The food minister yesterday told reporters that six major industrial groups Square, Pran, City, Akij, Bashundhara and ACI -- were mainly to blame for hoarding and the rise in rice prices.

Spokespersons of the companies denied wrongdoing when contacted by this
