Drong, secretary of Bangladesh Indigenous Peoples Forum.

Rashed Khan Menon, parliamentarian and president of Workers' Party, said it is tragic that the indigenous groups are disappearing while the government is debating whether or not the word "adibashi" can be used. "There needs to be a separate land commission for indigenous people of the land lands," said Menon.

"Because of lack of formal systems, they face eviction from their villages, while their lands and properties are taken away from them."

Artist Mamunur Rashid spoke about the need to represent the communities in a way that does not exoticize them. "The communities are portrayed as tourist attractions -- with photos of colourful, dancing indigenous women."

"The documentation must also be in their own mother languages. There are no known novels or extensive literature in indigenous languages. These need to be encouraged."

"Our state is afraid of letting indigenous people build their own cultural narratives, lest they begin demanding their rights using that as a medium."

Prof Mesbah Kamal, vice chancellor of Bangladesh University, said the term "indigenous nationalities" should be used instead of "indigenous communities".

Parliamentarian Aroma Dutta also spoke at the event. Shaheen Anam, executive director of MJF, opened the programme.

Tahmid Ahmed, executive director of icddr, also spoke at the event.

Besides, speakers stressed for promoting water consumption.

"No one could factor in the pandemic situation when the national action plan was prepared," said Meghna Guhathakurta, executive director of Research Initiatives, Bangladesh and former professor of Dhaka University, who was also involved in preparing the action plan.

"In the next action plan, we have to think of the situations like a pandemic, and also about Rohingya women," she added.

Tania Sharmin, women peace and security programme analyst of UN Women, expressed hopes that the WPS plan will be extended further for its full implementation.

Referring to Bangladesh's 91st rank in the Global Peace Index 2021, Shamsuddoza Sajen, representing The Daily Star, said, "We have an invisible security situation here in Bangladesh that goes against women."

Mohammad Golam Sarwar, assistant professor of law at Dhaka University, echoed the same.
