Customs official ‘threatened from abroad’

FM MIZANUR RAHAMAN, Ctg

An official of Chattogram Custom House has reportedly received a death threat from abroad, after he disclosed information about seized liquor consignments, which were illegally imported using false declaration.

The consignments were seized by customs officials and Rapid Action Battalion (Rab) on July 22 in Narayanganj.

Assistant Revenue Officer (ARO) Rashedur Rahman lodged a general diary (GD), seeking security, with the port city's EPZ police station on July 24, after informing the matter to his higher authority. He is attached to Chattogram Export Processing Zone customs station.

Talking to The Daily Star, ARO Rashedur said, “After verifying the information, I had shared it with my senior officials, and they blocked the consignments with the help

Concerted effort is the key Says planning minister on child development at book launching

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Planning Minister MA Mannan yesterday said many areas regarding child development require concerted efforts.

He made the remarks during the unveiling ceremony of “50 Years of Bangladesh for Children”, a book compiling 15 pieces by eminent figures of the country on the overall picture of children in Bangladesh in the past 50 years, at a programme in Dhaka.

The book is jointly published by Save the Children and Prothoma Prokashon.

Apart from some study-based articles, the book includes writings that reflect the authors' experience of fieldwork, present realities of the lives of the country's children, and steps to overcome existing barriers in child development.

The book also highlights alternative ideas to prevent violence against children and other issues like protecting the child's health, future, development, prospects, challenges, and safety have also come up.

‘Please don’t write about us, we still have to live here’

Victims of Narail mayhem tell civil society members

MOKAMMEL SHUVO, back from Narail

“It was a whimsical attack. The situation is normal now. Everyone lives here in a friendly atmosphere and harmony,” said seniors of the Hindu community at Sahapara village of Narail district.

They talked to this correspondent before members of the civil society visited the village after the communal attack carried out on July 15.

When the conversation between civil society representatives and leaders of the Hindu community turned to the identities and motives of the attackers, the latter seemed hesitant. “Please don't write anything that raises enmity. You will go back to Dhaka but we have to live here. And we want to live in peace,” they said.

During his visit to the village on Tuesday, this correspondent saw the hint of fear and anxiety still looming over the faces of Sahapara residents.

Though several police officers were guarding them round the clock in different points of the village, the sense of security seemed completely shattered. The trauma was more evident than ever.

normalcy with each passing day.

However, when asked about the whereabouts of her daughters, she replied that her daughters, along with a son-in-law, have not yet returned from their relative's house in another village since the night of the attack.

Residents of the locality said elders of the attacked families returned to the village one or two days after the incident.

However, the younger members are still staying out of the village in fear of another attack. Many of them refused to disclose their names while sharing their experiences.

The mob attacking the village said their religious sentiments were hurt by a Facebook post allegedly made by Akash Saha — an 18-year-old college student of the village.

This correspondent went to visit Akash's house but saw it abandoned.

His father, mother and younger brother did not return home after the attack, said a relative from the house next door.

Of the nine arrestees accused of the attack, three were from nearby Kumri village and one is from Talmaria.

Asked, UNO Md Azgar Ali said a meeting is being organised to be joined by people of all faiths soon.

Prof Sadika Halim of Dhaka University, one of the members of the civil society entourage, asked the authorities to ensure a safe and peaceful environment in the area during the upcoming Durga Puja.

Other members of the entourage were Samakal's advisory editor Abu Sayed Khan, DU faculty member Khairul Chowdhury, Nagorik Uddyog's Chief Executive Zakir Hossain, Sammilita Samajik Andolan Secretary Saleh Ahmed, Dipayan Khisa and Journalist Nazrul Kabir.

On July 15, Hindu households came under attack in Sahapara village of Narail's Lohagara upazila. At least 11 homes, five temples and around 20 shops were vandalised or burnt down.

Later, police filed a case accusing some 200 to 250 unnamed attackers but could only arrest eight of them till yesterday.
