

HANDS-ON REVIEW

Infinix Note 12 G96 - The Budget Speedster

TANZID SAMAD CHOWDHURY

Infinix came up with its latest addition in the Bangladesh market last month with the Note 12 G96. The Hong Kong-based smartphone brand has been doing reasonably well in the local market recently, and the newly released Note 12 G96 is a testament to that.

After having the Note 12 G96 smartphone in our possession for a few weeks, here's what we have to say about the device:

DESIGN

The Note 12 G96 has a glossy back design with a frosted matte finish. The review set which we received was Snowfall White in colour. The phone feels light on the hand and is easy to carry around. However, it can be difficult to use the phone with one hand, given its wide surface area. The back panel has a patterned texture and shows a yellowish reflection in broad daylight. The side-mounted fingerprint scanner happens to be on the same button as the power button and is generally smooth and easy to use.

Aesthetically, the phone is easily able to stand out in the crowd with its elegant design.

DISPLAY

The display is probably the best feature of this device. Infinix Note 12 G96 comes with a large 6.7-inch Full HD+ AMOLED display. It is great for watching videos, playing graphic-intensive games
