

Special law to protect journalists

Demands TIB

UNB, Dhaka

Transparency International Bangladesh (TIB) yesterday demanded a special law to protect journalists because they come under attacks while gleaning irregularities and corruption news, as part of attempts to gag the voice of the media.

TIB expressed deep concern over the recent attacks and demanded immediate, fair investigation and prosecution of all the attacks, said a release.

The recent spate of attacks on journalists while collecting news of irregularities and corruption is not an isolated incident, but rather a continuing trend and ill attempt of gagging the voice of media through abuse of power, attacks, cases and impunity, said TIB.

Medical centre owner, three others remanded

COURT CORRESPONDENT

A Dhaka court yesterday placed four people, including the owner of a medical centre, on three-day remand each in a case filed over attempting to kill a senior reporter and cameraperson of Independent Television in Kamrangirchar.

The accused are Dr MH Osmani (55), owner of SPA River Side Medical Centre; Dr DMA Abu Zahid (55), a physician of the centre; Abul Hasanat Sumon, director (admin and finance); and Rassel Howlader (38), accounts manager of Life and Care Hospital. Dhaka Metropolitan Magistrate Farha Diba Chhanda passed the order after IO Mohammad Mostafa Anowar, an inspector of

The pristine view of a boatman paddling in a waterbody surrounded by greenery would make anyone feel one with nature -- that is if the background wasn't present. Behind this view is Aminbazar landfill, where piles of garbage are dumped daily. Now, a mountain of waste can be seen from the distance, with smoke, a product of the burning trash, billowing from below. This photo was taken recently.

They've every right to be identified as 'indigenous'

Say speakers at events marking International Day of the World's Indigenous Peoples

Parbatya Chattogram Jana Samhati Samiti President Jyotirindra Bodhipriya Larma, known as Santu Larma, yesterday slammed the government for its directive discouraging the use of the word "indigenous".

Addressing an event in the capital yesterday, Larma said the indigenous people have every right to identify themselves as "indigenous".

"How would it feel if the Bangalees are termed the "majority community" instead of Bangalees?" he said.

Bangladesh Indigenous Women's Network, with support from Manusher Jonno Foundation (MJF), organised the event at The Daily Star Centre, marking the International Day of the World's Indigenous Peoples observed globally on Tuesday.

In a directive on July 19, the information ministry made a "request by order" to participants of talk shows, university teachers, experts, newspaper editors and civil society members not to use the word "indigenous" as part of their "constitutional obligation".

In his speech, Larma said the directive has been issued prohibiting the word's use in mass media, talk shows and administrative activities mentioning it as "unconstitutional".

Larma also said the government has been using its state machinery in different ways to establish one word, creating an existential and identity crisis for the indigenous peoples.

"In what way I will identify myself is my decision. It is my fundamental right. But the government refuses to recognise it," he added.

Addressing the event, Abu Sayeed Khan, advisory editor of Samakal, said it is the state's responsibility to ensure the security of the country's indigenous peoples.

"However, that was far from happening. The reason behind the issuing of this directive to abandon the word 'indigenous' is unclear," he said.

Bangladesh Mahila Parishad general secretary Maleka Banu said the state has overlooked the due recognition of the indigenous peoples of the country.

"The indigenous people of the country have been pushed towards marginalisation in the name of tourism and peace," she said.

Meanwhile, addressing a rally in the capital's Central Shaheed Minar on Tuesday -- organised by Bangladesh Adivasi Forum and supported by MJF -- Larma urged the young indigenous people to unite and carry on the legacy of the struggle for equality initiated by their ancestors.

He also lambasted the ruling

Covid jabs for kids to start today

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS) will launch the Covid-19 inoculation campaign for children, aged 5-11 years, today.

"The main campaign will start from the 25th of this month in only the city corporation areas and then it will be implemented countrywide," Dr Shamsul Haque, member secretary of the Covid-19 Vaccine Management Taskforce Committee, told The Daily Star yesterday.

Health Minister Zahid Maleque will inaugurate today's event at Bangabandhu International Conference Center in Dhaka around noon, said a press release from the ministry.

At the event, the directorate of primary education will vaccinate 15 children, Shamsul Haque said without elaborating further. About the total number of children eligible for this campaign, he said, "We have to cover every [primary] school and the directorate of primary education has been working on it."

There are a total of 2,19,32,638 primary schoolchildren, according to the directorate of primary education website data. Besides, there are many children of this age

Don't panic, we're not in a bad shape

LGRD minister tells discussion

There is no person in villages without food; every one has clothes, and Bangladesh is not in a bad situation, said Local Government, Rural Development and Cooperatives Minister Md Tazul Islam yesterday.

"There is a deficit in the current account [at present] due to container congestion. But the country has reserves. This [deficit] can be covered by reserves," said the minister at a city dialogue held at Dhaka Reporters Unity.

"Panic is being created, but I don't think we are in bad shape. We must come out of this misconception," he added.

The minister also said almost all roads in villages are paved. Primary schools have been established in every village, and houses are being built there.

Urban Development Journalists Forum, Bangladesh (UDJFB) organised the discussion on "Price increase of daily commodities and fuel: a challenge to public life."

The minister said, "We are importing more. Bangladesh imports the equivalent of $8 billion every month. This is putting pressure on us. On the other hand, we are happy to see Bangladesh importing that much a month... We can handle it now."

"Subsidy cannot be given in all cases. Subsidy cannot solve the problem... If subsidies are given, sectors will lose discipline. The government analyses where subsidies should be given and follows through," he said.

"In the last eight years, BPC made profits worth Tk 50,000 crore and have faced Tk 8,000 crore loss since February. People of Bangladesh were forced to purchase fuel at a high price when fuel costs came down to the

Dhaka hasn't sought specific info from Zurich Swiss ambassador on deposits of Bangladeshis with Swiss banks

DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh has never sought any specific information on the money deposited with Swiss banks by Bangladeshi citizens, said Switzerland Ambassador to Bangladesh Nathalie Chuard.

"We have provided the [Bangladesh] government with all available information on how to reach an agreement on these matters, but no request has been made about any particular funds," she said at the Diplomatic Correspondents Association, Bangladesh Talk at Jatiya Press Club yesterday.

NATHALIE CHUARD

We have provided the [Bangladesh] government with all available information on how to reach an agreement on these matters, but no request has been made about any particular funds.

She said this in response to a question that there were allegations that much of the money deposited by the Bangladeshis with Swiss banks was laundered and that the Swiss authorities did not provide any information about it.

Nathalie Chuard said Switzerland was not a safe haven for corrupt money. She said they certainly did not encourage capital flight and the Swiss banking system was the most renowned and internationally connected system.
