Dhaka wants to end border tensions thru discussions

Says foreign secretary

UNB, Dhaka

Bangladesh wants to avert any tensions along its border with Myanmar through dialogue amid raging internal conflicts in Rakhine state.

Speaking to journalists at the foreign ministry on Sunday, Foreign Secretary Masud Bin Momen said they would hold discussions through the existing mechanisms between Border Guard Bangladesh and its Myanmar counterpart to resolve the issues, if there is any.

"The incidents of blasts and falling mortar shells are basically happening inside the Myanmar border... But sounds are being heard here on the Bangladesh side, which may have left the people in border areas scared. However, we are observing the situation closely.

"The incidents were basically due to the actions taken against insurgents in Myanmar. They [Myanmar authorities] have acknowledged the matter."

Residents return to villages in the northeast

Ukrainian forces swept deeper into territory seized from fleeing Russian troops yesterday, as joyful residents returned to former frontline villages and Moscow grappled with the consequences of the collapse of its occupation force in northeastern Ukraine.

Ukraine's general staff said early yesterday that its soldiers had recaptured more than 20 towns and villages in just the past day, after Russia acknowledged it was abandoning Izium, its main stronghold in northeastern Ukraine.

"People are crying, people are joyful, of course. How could they not be joyful!" said retired English teacher Zoya, 76, north of Kharkiv in the village of Zolochiv 18 km from the Russian frontier, weeping as she described the months she had spent sheltering the cellar.

Nastya, 28, had fled the village in April but returned last week after news of Ukrainian advances: "I think everyone's in a great (mood)! It's all over now. At least we hope it's all over," she said, queuing for groceries with two small children.

Further north, Ukrainian troops had moved into Udi, a hamlet in what had been no-man's-land closer to the frontier. Soldiers returning from there said it was still unsafe, littered with

New dinosaur discovered in Germany!

MAIL ONLINE

The skeleton of a long-necked dinosaur that has been residing in a university museum in Germany for 100 years is actually that of a previously unknown species, a new study has revealed.

The skeleton was found in Trossingen, south-western Germany, in 1922, and is now part of the University of Tübingen's paleontological collection.

At the time, it was identified as belonging to a Plateosaurus - a herbivorous dinosaur with a long neck and grasping hands that lived during the Late Triassic period, around 214 to 204 million years ago.

However, a new analysis by paleontologists at the University of Tübingen has revealed it is a previously unknown species, which they have named Tuebingosaurus maierfritzorum.

Tuebingosaurus was a herbivore and had similarities with the large long-necked dinosaurs known as sauropods.

It lived about 203 to 211 million years ago in the region now known as Swabian Alb.
