‘Don’t drown’
the worldUN chief launches urgent appeal to leaders on climate change

AFP, United Nations

The UN chief has made an urgent appeal to world leaders to act on climate change and “lower the temperature” so as not to “drown” the world, after visiting flood-hit Pakistan.

“I have just returned from Pakistan, where I looked through a window into the future — a future of permanent and ubiquitous climate chaos on an unimaginable scale,” Secretary-General Antonio Guterres told a news conference days before dozens of global leaders were due to arrive in New York for the UN General Assembly High-Level Week.

“What is happening in Pakistan demonstrates the sheer inadequacy of the global response to the climate crisis, and the betrayal and injustice at the heart of it.”

Nearly 1,400 people died in flooding in Pakistan that covers an area the size of the United Kingdom.

“My message to world leaders gathering here is clear: Lower the temperature — now. Don’t flood the world today; don’t drown it tomorrow,” he said on Wednesday, denouncing “decades of intransigence by big emitters,” particularly Group of 20 members.

“If one-third of G20 countries was under water today, as it could be tomorrow, perhaps they would find it easier to agree on drastic cuts to emissions.”

He hit out at big fossil fuel companies as well, accusing them of “killing the planet to rake in the most” possible.

Guterres also lamented divisions in the international community, saying, “Geostategic divides are the widest they have been since at least the Cold War.”

“They are paralyzing the global response to the dramatic challenges we face,” including war, climate change, poverty, hunger and inequality, he said. “The solidarity envisioned in the United Nations Charter is being devoured by the acids of nationalism and self-interest.”

Members of the public file past the coffin of Queen Elizabeth II, draped in the Royal Standard with the Imperial State Crown and the Sovereign's orb and sceptre, lying in state on the catafalque in Westminster Hall, at the Palace of Westminster, London, ahead of her funeral on Monday. Tens of thousands of mourners, some waiting through the night, queued for hours yesterday to pay their last respects to Queen Elizabeth II on the first full day of her coffin lying in state.

MAJOR BILL TO MAKE TAIWAN TIES MORE OFFICIAL
US Senate takes first step

AFP, Washington

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee took the first step Wednesday toward the United States directly providing billions of dollars in military aid to Taiwan and making ties more official, ramping up support following.

The United States has for decades sold weapons to Taiwan but the new legislation will go further by providing US security assistance to the tune of $4.5 billion over four years, a move that has infuriated Beijing.

China slammed the bill yesterday, saying it had lodged “solemn representations” with Washington over legislation it claimed “violates the one-China principle”.

Under the act, the United States will still not diplomatically recognize Taiwan. The de facto US embassy — now officially the Taipei Economic and Cultural Representative Office — would be renamed the Taiwan Representative Office and the US government would be instructed to interact with Taiwan as it would with any government.

The act would also designate Taiwan a “major non-Nato ally,” a status for the closest US military partners outside of the trans-Atlantic alliance.

A Tribute to Yasir Arafat

For T.S Eliot, it was April. For us, it is this month of September that proved to be the cruellest.

Yasir Arafat, 33, loving husband of my younger sister Urmila Chowdhury, and someone I loved and adored as a little brother, passed away from a sudden massive heart attack on 12th September, 2022. This tragic role that fate played in the lives of his loved ones has left all of us emotionally shattered and leaves that unfillable void. 5 years ago, Yasir made my sister Urmila the happiest girl in the world as her husband and, in no time, won the hearts of those around him with his sweet, humble and innocent nature. Always with a smile, there was never a dull moment with him around. He was the only child of late

Mr Ishtiaq Farook and late Mrs Fahmida Farook. We imagine the parents and son in a heavenly embrace in a world better than ours. We will try and find solace in that. He leaves behind his loving wife Urmila, friends and cousins and a lifetime of loving memories. Please kindly pray for this wonderful individual who I shall forever love as my little brother. May the Almighty has His angels guide him towards his eternal peace. By Rushmilla Rahman, eldest sister of Urmila Chowdhury.

Only a level-

Opposition parties were yet to be strong or popular enough to emerge as a force playing an effective role in ensuring free and fair polls, he said.

Responding to a query, Ittekkharuzzaman said it was unfortunate and unacceptable that institutions such as the administration and law enforcement agencies that are responsible for upholding democracy have been made into “partisan platforms”.

He said that being an anti-graft watchdog, the TIB is concerned over the role of Jatiya Sangsad since it is one of the democratic institutions that represent the people and play an important role in holding the government accountable.

Stressing the importance of the polls-time roles of the administration and the law enforcement agencies, he said the neutral role that they should play was not visible during the previous elections.

The Election Commission needs to ensure that transfer and posting of officials of the administration and members of law enforcement agencies during polls-time happen under its supervision, he added.

The TIB executive director said the main concern was ensuring a “level-playing field”, and there are two main challenges in achieving it.

“One is what will be the role of the polls-time government,” he said, adding that there was need for bringing legal reforms to make sure the polls-time government is neutral and impartial.

“We believe the Election Commission also feels that way,” he said, suggesting that the EC ask the government to formulate laws so that the polls-time government plays its due role and ensures a level-playing field.

In Bangladesh, the playing field becomes uneven when ministers and lawmakers run while still serving their posts, he said.

In such a situation, the candidates in question enjoy advantages, and local administration and law enforcement agencies come under a certain type of pressure, he added.

“The EC needs to look into this,” he added.
