Punishment to culprits

The court also issued a rule to this effect and asked the DC of Dhaka to make a reply to the rule in eight weeks, Deputy Attorney General Imran Ahmed Bhuiyan told this correspondent.

The HC bench said it is necessary to ensure a fair trial of the case through properly analysing the circumstantial evidence and documents, and confessional statements of the accused as there is apparently no interested person from the victims about this case.

On July 20, 2019, 40-year-old Renu, mother of Tuba and Mahir, went to Badda Uttar-Purba Primary School to inquire about the admission process to get four-year-old Tuba enrolled in the school.

A mob beat her brutally to death in front of the school gate, suspecting her to be a kidnapper. Videos taken on mobile phones and CCTV, which later went viral, showed multiple people assaulting Renu with several hundred people around, most of whom were just silent spectators.

The killing, which outraged the entire country, took place at a time when incidents of mob attacks on people labelling them as "child kidnappers" were on the rise.

Following the incident, Syed Nasir Uddin Titu, Renu's nephew, filed the case against 400 to 500 unnamed attackers at Badda Police Station. The investigation officer of the case submitted a charge sheet to a Dhaka court on September 10, 2020, against the 15 accused.

On December 2 that year, Metropolitan Magistrate Md Manunur Rashid took cognisance of charges against the 15 accused and issued an arrest warrant against one Mohin Uddin, who was shown a fugitive in the case's charge sheet.

import only one lakh tonnes wheat could get the work order of importing five lakh tonnes of wheat?" he asked. Not being a part of the food items import sector, how National Electronic BD, a third-party local agency, got the work as a middleman, is another big question, he added.

The statement wrote that a South Asian country cancelled the agreement with Prodiutorg recently due to the inflated rate.

"While the wheat price is decreasing in the global market, it is easily understandable that such agreement is for benefiting the middlemen by a syndicate who are misusing their power."

He demanded a fair and neutral investigation to disclose the people behind the scene and bring them to book.

High Court stays defamation case against journo

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The High Court yesterday stayed for six months the trial proceedings of a defamation case filed against Somoy TV journalist Afzal Hossain over airing a report on corruption allegation against a Noakhali court official, Mohammad Alamgir.

The HC bench of Justice Mohammad Ullah and Justice Mohi Uddin Shamim delivered the order following a petition filed by Afzal.

Alamgir, najir (sheriff) of Noakhali District Judge's Court, filed the case with a Noakhali court on May 5 last year against six people, including the private TV channel's Senior Reporter Afzal Hossain, Senior News Editor Manwar Hossain and Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer Ahmed Jobaer.

He filed the case after Somoy TV ran a report headlined "Adaloter Tritiyo Srenir Karmacharir Aboidho Sampader Pahar" (mountain of illegal assets of a class III employee of a court) on February 23, 2021.

going through a tough time raising him. Her husband had left her. She wasn't being able to feed him well, and was mostly feeding rice water," recalled Hazera.

"Shimul's mother had left her profession soon after we took his responsibility," she added.

"Doctors were available only once a month at Durjoy, so we had to take him to the Shishu hospital almost every week, wrapping him in a sari," she added.

When Durjoy was closed, he was with his mother for some days, but as soon as Hazera started Shishuder Jonno Amra, his mother sent him to Hazera's shelter again.

"I tried my best to look after this shy son of mine, provide him with proper education and tuition. Today, he's 16-year-old and has become a healthy boy," laughed Hazera.

"Shimul's mother, who currently works at an insurance company, comes to meet him once or twice a year. Shimul doesn't care about her mother's past (profession)," she added.

Shimul is the only SSC examinee at the shelter this year. "So far, the exams went well. I'm hoping for the best," he said, adding, "Everything was possible for ammu."

When asked about his aim in life, he said he wants to be a banker.

Although Hazera's finances never allowed her to complete her education, she always dreams that her children will be educated and live a life full of dignity. Hazera has also been planning to involve her four sons to work, as they are comparatively older, and took vocational training.

At present, however, Hazera dreams of a permanent building for the shelter, as the number of children keeps increasing.

"My daughters are growing up, so I had to shift my older sons to different places. Some of them had to be returned to their mothers. But the kids want to be together," said Hazera.

"If we could have separate floors for boys and girls, it would be great," she added.

"Besides, I always wanted to turn my shelter into a home for underprivileged children, which won't be limited to the children of sex workers only," she said.

"I don't have many wants. I just want to make sure my daughters never end up in the sex trade, while my boys live a life away from drugs and extortion," Hazera added.

"Names of all the children have been changed to protect their privacy.

after one of the stolen paintings resurfaced in Cumilla. Ruma's present husband Palash, gave a Facebook post on March 31 claiming that an art exhibition displayed an original art piece of Humayun Ahmed.

The 10-day exhibition titled "Selected paintings

The complainant alleged that event organisers did not obtain the painting legally and it was part of the four paintings that were not returned to Humayun's family back in 2013.

the government to formulate and amend the laws.

However, the commission could not hold such a meeting after Justice ABM Khairul Huq's tenure expired. Commission officials are now working on the issues decided by the commission in its policy meetings.

The institution will face difficulties if a chairman is not appointed soon, according to the sources.

The Commission's secretary Atwar Rahman told this correspondent that the commission has so far made 166 recommendations for formulating and amending laws after the institution was established in 1996.

He, however, could not say how many recommendations have been accepted by the governments.

There is no rule for the commission to monitor whether the government accepts its recommendations or not, he said.

Atwar Rahman also mentioned that the commission is now working in continuation of the previous activities, including the amendment of the Evidence Act.

He said it has sent a proposal to the government to increase the number of its members to four instead of the existing two. The commission is yet to get a decision from the government to this effect.
