Robbing the freshly-landed Rab arrests airport-based robbery gang

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Even though Amir Hossain (52) used to work at a fast-food restaurant near the Dhaka airport, he was often seen on the airport premises with a passport and a luggage.

In disguise of an expatriate who just returned from abroad, Amir used to keep a close watch on other returnees and tried to befriend them.

He would offer his targets a microbus-ride with him, driven by his cohort. Sometimes, he would also offer them bus rides.

Once the targets agreed, Amir and his cohorts would sedate them and rob their money and other valuables on their way.

Rapid Action Battalion (Rab) revealed the information on Saturday after arresting Amir and three of his accomplices in Dhaka.

Amir is the kingpin of an airport-based gang. He and his gang members have sedated and robbed around 300 people -- mostly expatriates -- in the last 15 years.

Director, Rab's legal and media wing

The three other arrestees are -- Liton Mia alias Milton (48), Abu Bakar Siddique Parvez (35) and Jakir Hossain (40).

"Amir is the kingpin of an airport-based gang. He and his gang members have sedated and robbed around 300 people -- mostly expatriates -- in the last 15 years," said Khandaker Al Moin, Rab's legal and media wing director, told a press conference yesterday.

Using similar tricks, Amir on September 2, robbed the luggage -- carrying valuables like eight tolas of gold ornaments -- of a Bangladeshi expatriate who returned from Kuwait and was on his way to Bogura, Moin said.

This gang of at least 10 members is active in the Hazrat Shahjalal International Airport area for years, he added.

They mainly target expats who are accompanied by only one attendee at the airport to take them home.

The Rab director said Amir was arrested twice -- on January and April -- for the same offence.

However, he started the gang's operations again once he was out on bail.

New horizon in climate research

Climate Technology Park launched in Gazipur

MOSTAFA YOUSUF

Climate Technology Park, launched on Saturday in Gazipur's Stripur upazila, is set to open a new horizon in adaptation research to tackle the impacts of climate change.

The centre was built by Christian Commission for the Development of Bangladesh (CCDB), with financial support from German-based donor agency Brot Für Die Welt (Bread for the World).

Minister of Agriculture Muhammad Abdur Razzaque inaugurated the facility.

"The centre will bring a radical change in the country's fight against climate change," he said.

"Gazipur was renowned for its sprawling Sal forest. However, that is old history now. The destruction of the forest reserves is one of the major causes behind global warming and climate change. The more the deforestation, the more the natural calamities," he added.

Those involved with the facility said this centre will address the knowledge gap, lack of climate technologies and action research to create contextual solution to the climate crisis through engaging academia, researchers, affected communities, development practitioners and policy makers.

The centre was built in an area of 30 acres and has five ecological zones, including a haor region, a dry region, Char areas, hilly areas and a coastal zone, illustrating the resilience mechanism of each zone.

Climate expert Saleemul Huq told The Daily Star that there are different activities going on in different regions.

One of the key features of the facility is that it has five different ecosystem zones in display, where one can easily get a picture of what kind of impact each zone is facing.

"Global researchers will come here to see how we are coping with the impacts of climate change. They will share their knowledge and learn from our resilience strategies," he said.

The state-of-art facility will mainstream the transformative adaptation and climate risk reduction by accelerating innovation, capacity development and knowledge dissemination, said CCDB Executive Director Juliate Keya Malakar.

"It is our dream that this centre will now start supporting us, the communities we work with, and the country, in shaping our common future in climate resilience and zero carbon emission pathways", she said.

The facility also has 70 practical technologies that are effective in Awami League General Secretary Obaidul Quader yesterday said there was some lack of caution on their part during last year's Durga Puja as they thought like previous years the celebrations will be held in a peaceful manner.

Quader, also road transport and bridges minister, said, "It is true that we were not careful at some places (during the Puja celebration last year). The worst incident took place in Chaumuhani..."
