

Jet fuel now costlier than ever

Airlines worried about more expenses; travellers may bear the brunt

RASHIDUL HASAN

Local airlines will have to face a huge blow, as the price of jet fuel has been hiked again, this time for domestic routes. The airlines are worried about their operational costs and said that this increase will ultimately hike airfares, burdening travellers.

Padma Oil Company Limited, a subsidiary of Bangladesh Petroleum Corporation (BPC) increased the price of jet fuel by Tk 5 per litre. The new price came into effect on October 26.

So, a litre of jet fuel now costs Tk 130. BPC, however, slightly decreased jet fuel price for international routes.

The price for international routes will become $1, as opposed to the previous price of $1.09.

Stakeholders in the aviation industry blasted BPC for its “whimsical decision” to increase the price. They said it is illogical, as jet fuel price has remained static in the international market.

This is the 17th time Padma Oil Company increased the price in the last 23 months.

Due to the price hike, air travellers will have to pay more, sources in the aviation

Talking to The Daily Star, Mofizur Rahman, secretary general of Aviation Operators Association of Bangladesh (AOAB) and managing director of Novo Air, said there is no logic behind the latest decision.

From friendly phone calls to blackmail

DB arrests two members of extortion gang

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The group first collects phone numbers and professional details of noted people, especially men, from social-media platforms and websites.

Then a female member tries to get acquainted with the target by talking on the phone or through texting.

As per the plan, the member tries to convince the target to meet at a designated spot. If anyone shows interest, the gang takes the victim to a secluded place.

During that time, other group members, identifying themselves as police officials, take compromising pictures and videos and threaten to release in the media if the victim does not pay a certain amount.

Police’s Detective Branch (DB) gave this information yesterday, following the arrest of two of the gang’s masterminds on Wednesday.

The arrestees are Md Khokon Akanda and his partner Bilkis Begum.

Police arrested the duo from Savar, after a complaint was filed with Darussalam police station, Md Nazmul Hoque, additional deputy commissioner of DB, told The Daily Star yesterday.

In the complaint, the victim mentioned that Bilkis wanted to meet him, saying that she needs to file insurance for some of her relatives.

Expats involved in anti-govt activities to face music

Foreign ministry tells JS body

RASHIDUL HASAN

Bangladeshi expatriates involved in anti-government activities abroad will be brought under law, the foreign ministry has informed a parliamentary standing body yesterday during a meeting at Jatiya Sangsad Bhaban.

During yesterday’s meeting, the ministry officials submitted a report on the implementation progress of that recommendation.

“Sadly, besides playing a positive role in protecting the interests of Bangladesh and sending remittances, many of the expats are engaged in propaganda against Bangladesh and the government. The government is working to bring those to book who are engaged in anti-government activities and giving provocative and completely fabricated statements,” read the report.

The committee was informed by the ministry that regular efforts are being made to publish informative news, essays and articles in the international and online media to counter the propaganda against the government and highlight the positive image of Bangladesh.

Besides, when false and misleading news reports are published in the international media, the foreign ministry takes measures to publish objective and informative protest letters (rejoinders) to counter those.

Ruling Awami League lawmaker Kazi Nabil Ahmed, a member of the committee in the previous meeting of the JS body, said due to the continuous propaganda against the government, representatives of some countries belonging to the European Union have started to express negative attitudes towards Bangladesh.

HOSPITALS STRUGGLING

UNB, Dhaka

Many hospitals in the city, including Dhaka Medical College Hospital, are struggling to provide treatment to the rising number of dengue patients due to the shortage of beds.

In scenes reminiscent of the country’s worst-ever dengue outbreak in 2019, many patients suffering from dengue fever were seen receiving treatment on the floors and corridors as hospitals run out of beds to accommodate them.

Visiting various areas in the city, the news agency found that hospitals, including Holy Family Hospital, Mugda Medical College and Hospital, Bangladesh Shishu Hospital & Institute, Dhaka Medical College Hospital and Kurmitola General Hospital, are treating patients on the floor as all the beds in their respective wards have been filled with patients affected by the mosquito-borne disease.

However, the number of infections may start to fall in the first week of November, said Dr Nazmul Islam, director of the Disease Control Department of DGHS.

Recently, the number of dengue patients has increased across the country. But the fatalities can be considerably reduced if patients go to doctors at the right time, he said.

He also said dengue fever has increased due to climate change. Besides, due to a lack of awareness, mosquito-borne disease has increased this time.

A total of 123 people have died of dengue till yesterday. Doctors said children are the worst sufferers.

“Creating awareness among people is a must to rein in the dengue menace. We have taken various steps in this regard,” Health Minister Zahid Maleque told the news agency.

Dhaka North City Corporation Hospital -- a new unit of BSMMU -- and Lalkuthi Hospital have been kept ready in case of emergency, he added.

The minister said the city corporations and municipalities have been urged to stay vigilant about killing mosquitoes.

If the number of mosquitoes is reduced, the number of patients will automatically decrease resulting in the low pressure of dengue patients in the hospital, the minister observed.
