Art as a form of resistance

Ruposhree said, "When I came to know that we had a rich history of weaving, I wanted to highlight it and showcase the current crisis it faces within the community."

"I imagined myself as that woman who wanted to start weaving again, but I don't know the actual methods of our traditional weaving," she added.

Ruposhree also tried to preserve all the fairy tales and stories of her community through her paintings. "I tried to give colour to those stories I heard from my grandparents. I want those stories to survive in my paintings," she said.

Talking about her future work, Ruposhree said she wants to harmoniously coexist with nature," highlight the connection between she added.
