His continuously focuses some new portable transistorised on the Mukti Bahini's crucial role: equipment of Japanese origin was also used by our boys.

The Mukti Bahini's indomitable spirit is evident in the writings of Indian Lt Gen Jacob. "They achieved largely responsible for lowering their significant results in occupation of areas in the interior, demolitions and harassment of the enemy even before hostilities started. They completely demoralised the Pakistan Army, lowering their morale and creating such a hostile environment that their ability to operate was restricted and they were virtually confined to their fortified locations. The overall achievements of the Mukti Bahini and the East Bengal Regiments were enormous. Bangladesh can be proud of them. Their contribution was a crucial element in the operations surrender." Little did he realise that prior to and during full-scale Yahya Khan had already abandoned hostilities. Regarding the precarious plight writes, "The Pakistan Army in the positions, where for the most part they remained." He also eulogises the fact that Pakistan never expected "our bypassing strategy using subsidiary surprise by our rapid advances" (Pg "Due credit must also be given to the Mukti Bahini. Their guerrilla operations isolated the Pakistanis. hampered their movement and were morale. Their contribution to the victory of the joint Indo-Bangladesh Forces was therefore enormous." (Pg 158, ibid).

All hopes of Pakistan's survival was finally obliterated when their much avowed friendly build-up of the US Seventh Fleet failed to cross the Indian Ocean in the face of the threat extended by the naval buildup of the Russian armada. This worked as a final blow to Niazi's boastful utterance, "I shall fight for a thousand years, but will not him, paving the way for his forces to become prisoners of war.
