

In-between innings with Mou

SHARMIN JOYA

The FIFA World cup kept Mousumi Mou extremely busy, besides she also had her hands full with the Cricket T20 World Cup.

Although the anchor's favourite team, Brazil, failed to make it past the quarter finals, she continued to smile and hosted the live show the next day, discussing the faults of her favourite team.

Since you did more shows on cricket, are you also a football fan?

Before doing the shows for football this season, I was not. That being said, I was fond of football during my childhood.

Which would you choose between cricket and football?

I can't really choose between cricket and football, and to tell you the truth, I was well-versed in cricket, since I was doing cricket shows for a long time.

Do you think that the football World Cup had more craze in our country than cricket?

Of course. The football World Cup comes after four years, but cricket is more readily available. Also, football is much easier to understand, it has rhythm, and takes less time to finish. Football is said to be the greatest show on earth for a reason.

At one time, we had an undying craze for our local teams, Abahani and Mohammedan, similar to the excitements we see for Brazil and Argentina. We should not forget about our Shadhin Bangla Football team, how great they were! I still believe that someday our football team will reach a milestone.

What would be your profession if you were not an anchor?

I wanted to become a doctor. Unfortunately, I was not able to get a seat for myself in public medicals. As I did not want to study in private, I choose to pursue other options. Ultimately, I became an anchor, mime artiste and an actress.

What are your upcoming ventures?

During the World Cup, I had to reject a lot of fictions and web-projects. I have recently worked in a music video, featuring the singer Kornia. The video story is mime based, and as a mime artiste, I enjoyed working on this project. I will also be hosting the upcoming BPL season for two private channels.

The Breaking Bad pair, Aaron Paul and Bryan Cranston have posted some epic street-style merch which is a must have for fans of the show. The cinnamon-brown coloured hooded, all-in-one suit is something that looks super comfy and edgy, accompanied with cute images of ferns and animated horses.

TV TALKIES

Chainsaw Man

Set in a world where devils are born from human's fear, Chainsaw Man is an anime unlike anything that has come before it. Unlike your typical shonen, this show really does a great job of portraying how bleak life can be at times, all the while also showcasing how it's the simplest things that can sometimes bring about the most joy.

Our main character, Denji, is a 16-year-old boy living in poverty. He is trapped in this world, as he has unfortunately had to take on the responsibility of paying back his dead-father's debt to the Yakuza. Having already sold many of his organs to chip away at the debt, Denji struggles to find a way to make ends meet. Accompanied by his cute companion, Pochita—the Chainsaw Devil—Denji tries his best to get by, all the while dreaming of a future when he will be able to do something as simple as eat jam and toast.

However, when the Yakuza betray and try to kill Denji—due to a contract they have made with the Zombie Devil—Pochita rescues Denji from death. The two sign a contract, where Pochita merges with Denji's body, with his only request being to see Denji fulfil his dreams.

Combined with MAPPA studio's elite animations, Chainsaw Man is definitely a show you should check out.
