

Four hurt as BCL factions scuffle at DU women's dorm

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Two factions of Chhatra League locked in a scuffle over supremacy at Dhaka University's Bangamata Sheikh Fazilatunnesa Mujib Hall yesterday evening, leaving at least four female students hurt.

The tussle ensued around 8:00pm inside the hall between a group led by the hall's BCL unit President Kohinur Akhter Rakhi and General Secretary Sanjina Yasmin and another group led by Rawnak Jahana, former Liberation War affairs deputy secretary of the hall unit of BCL, said sources.

Over the past few days, Rawnak accompanied by her follower Tania Akhter Taposhi had been mobilising resident students of the hall to create a new faction against Rakhi and Sanjina. Enraged by that, Rakhi and Sanjina locked in an altercation with Rawnak and her followers in the evening. At one point, several dozens of students belonging to both groups started punching each other, which left four students including Rawnak and Tania hurt.

The injured students were taken to the university's medical centre where they took primary treatment.

DU Proctor Prof AKM Golam Rabbani, who visited the hall after the incident, said he received information that the incident took place following a "misunderstanding" among few students. The hall authorities have been asked to look into the matter, he said, adding, they will take action against those guilty after conducting a probe.

Termining the incident "unaccepted", DU BCL unit General Secretary Tanvir Hasan Saikat said they were trying to resolve the matter through discussion. If that fails they will take organisational action against those guilty.

Buri Teesta levee, a relief for locals

OUR CORRESPONDENT,

Nilphamari

The newly-constructed embankment along Buri Teesta river in Nilphamari's Jaldhaka upazila has been a blessing for thousands of people residing in 30 villages, because now they are protected from regular floods, thanks to the efforts of Water Development Board (WDB).

Locals and WDB sources said the 69-kilometre Buri Teesta merges with the mighty Teesta at Banpara village, where the embankment was built.

But only a year ago, floods and river erosion were regular scenarios there, as about 13.5-km stretch of the embankment, from Golumunda to Banpara, was in a vulnerable state for a long time.

As a result, people of 30 villages under three unions - Golumunda, Sholmari and Koimari - in the upazila were the worst sufferers. Properties worth Tk 15 to 20 crore used to get damaged every year.

However, locals found new hope when a WDB project titled "Making Charalkata river straight and protection of Buri Teesta embankments" came into effect in 2021-2022 fiscal year.

Mahamudunnabi, a representative for "Save the Buri Teesta" movement, said not only was the embankment of Buri Teesta built, but the river was also dredged adequately to restore its navigability.

Nilphamari WDB Sub Divisional Engineer Abdul Hannan Prodhan said the project was a full-fledged package that included river dredging, construction of embankment, flood protection works and tree plantation.

"Not only high embankments, but dredging is also important to control floods," he said.

During a recent visit to Banpara, Taluk Sholmari and Bokshipara villages, this correspondent saw many shoal people either sitting or having a walk by the newly constructed embankment.

Erosion victim Mahatabuddin, now living on other's land at Banpara, said, "If the dam was built two or three years ago, I wouldn't have become landless."

Nilphamari WDB Executive Engineer Krishnakamol Chandra Sarker said, "Beyond flood control, the impact of the project on ecology is great, as the river got back its navigability."

Hasina National Institute of Burn and Plastic Surgery. But in winter, the hospitals give priority to accommodating more burn patients, doctors said.

After coronavirus gripped the country in 2020, the burn unit of DMCH was dedicated for Covid patients. The number of burn patients in the facility was about as low as 50 during that time. But now again, the whole unit is dedicated to burn patients. Besides, many patients are also coming to the outdoor unit with minor burns requiring primary treatment, doctors said.

While visiting the hospital, this newspaper also met four-year-old Arafat.

The child was playing in his house in Burichang upazila of Cumilla while his mother Parul Akhter was boiling bathwater. She was un mindful for few minutes, and Arafat fell in the hot water. The child sustained 13 percent burn injuries following the incident.

For the last 16 days, he has been at the burn unit of DMCH.

"Although almost everything is free at the government hospital, we still needed to spend about Tk 30,000 to buy some medicines and to meet our everyday cost," said Parul.

and while returning to his cousin's home in the evening, Hasan saw a group of people warming themselves with a fire they lit up using dried leaves and branches. Hasan and his cousin joined them. After a while, Hasan threw a branch into the fire to keep it running.

He sustained eight percent burns and received treatment including burn dressing at the National Institute of Burn and Plastic Surgery on Thursday night. Talking to The Daily Star, Dr Samanta Lal Sen, chief national coordinator for plastic surgery and burn projects in Bangladesh, said every year, the number of burn patients increases in winter as the usage of fire and cooking stove go up for the purpose of warming body, boiling water and heating curries.

Many times, it leads to unexpected fire incidents due to negligence and unawareness, he added.

Burn treatment is comparatively expensive than other treatments. Generally, a severe patient needs to stay at the hospital from one to six months, according to doctors.

"This winter, we could not accommodate all patients at the same time as the number of beds is still low. So, we are giving primary treatment to those who have small burns
