It had been a cold and windy start to the day. By the time this correspondent met Aleya in the capital's Khilgaon area yesterday, the 65-year-old was trying to catch some sleep sitting on a footpath. However, all she had was a thin blanket to keep her warm, which was proving inadequate to battle the elements. Homeless people are the worst sufferers of the biting cold wave that has been sweeping the nation for the past few days.

Ruby Ghaznavi passes away

STAR REPORT

Ruby Ghaznavi, a pioneer of the handicrafts movement in Bangladesh, passed away in Dhaka yesterday.

She was 88 years old. It was in the hands of Ghaznavi that natural dyes saw a re-birth in Bangladesh. Drawing inspiration from Kamaladevi Chattopadhyay, an Indian social reformer and freedom activist, who made a significant contribution to the development of the handicrafts industry in India following its independence, Ghaznavi devoted herself to the development of handicrafts in Bangladesh.

She started her work in 1982 with natural dyes, experimenting with only six colours. Through the years, that number kept on increasing.

In 1985, Ruby, along with patua Quamrul Hassan and other like-minded individuals, established National Crafts Council of Bangladesh

Bangladesh Betar's external service inoperative for three years

SAJJAD HOSSAIN and ARAFAAT RAHAMAN

The external service of Bangladesh Betar has remained disconnected from the rest of the world for over three years due to a mechanical fault, depriving a vast diaspora of foreign listeners.

The worldwide service, which was accessed through mobile apps and the web, shut down on March 3, 2019, as a valve, a major part of the voice-transmitting machine, went out of order, according to the director of Betar's external service department.

The lone state-run radio station used to broadcast programmes for eight and a half hours daily for its foreign audience from Dhaka's Kabirpur station. It covered news and different development and cultural programmes in Europe, the Middle East, South Africa, and neighbouring countries, in five languages – Bangla, English, Hindi, Nepalese and Arabic.

The long closure has put a question mark over the country's future in providing proper services to people who tune into Betar, said experts. Mentionable, Betar's external service was launched in 1972.

After the Liberation War, the station became a voice of the country for locals and foreigners. Since then, Bangladesh Betar established itself as one of the most high-profile and popular international radio broadcasters, according to officials.

Nasrullah Md Irfan, additional director general of Bangladesh Betar, said they have been unable to repair the machine as the supplier did not cooperate in this regard.

He said Betar authorities tried to communicate with Thomson, the French company that supplied the machine and was supposed to provide technical support for 15 years, till 2024.

"We've communicated with them many times, but they aren't supplying the parts," Irfan said recently at a programme.

The Daily Star sent a mail and text message to Thomson for comments, but it did not respond.

Abdul Alim, sub-assistant engineer of the Kabirpur radio station, said as the machine is not working, there is no alternative way of sending audio outside the country.

Md Masud Bhuiyan, the chief engineer of Bangladesh Betar, said a new valve would cost them around Tk 1.40 crore.

"But we have a budget of Tk 1.20 crore," said Bhuiyan. "Besides, it normally takes more time to buy such equipment as we have to follow international tender processes."

Over the suspension of transmission, Shams Ibne Obaid, station chief of Radio Bhumi, said, "The government has been spending a lot of money in this sector. But being one of the richest departments, Bangladesh Betar has only been counting losses for years, instead of serving anything good for the people."

Shahanaj Begum, director of Bangladesh Betar's external service department, refused to comment on this matter when contacted over the phone.

Dhaka, Tokyo for 'strategic partnership'

UNB, Dhaka

Foreign Minister AK Abdul Momen has said Bangladesh and Japan now have an ideal opportunity to take bilateral relations to new heights through closer and deeper "strategic partnership".

Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina and late Shinzo Abe, former prime minister of Japan, elevated the relationship to a "comprehensive partnership" in 2014, he said.

Momen was speaking as chief guest at the inaugural ceremony of the second International Hybrid Conference on "Japanology in New Era", organised by the Department of Japanese Studies, University of Dhaka at the institution's Senate Auditorium yesterday.

"Our excellent bilateral relations have been enriched in content and dimension in recent years under the leadership of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina, who visited Japan five times," said the foreign minister.

The PM is likely to visit Japan in April this year. After Japan's prompt recognition of Bangladesh's independence on February 10, 1972, Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman undertook a historic visit to Japan in October 1973 and laid the foundation of today's exemplary bilateral relations, Momen said.

Prof Md Akhtaruzzaman, vice chancellor of DU, chaired the discussion.

'Legally protect domestic workers'

Demand trade union leaders

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Trade union leaders and civil society members yesterday demanded an end to the torture of house helps and to legally protect them in the country.

Besides, they also demanded compensation for domestic workers who faced violence, their proper treatment and exemplary punishment of the culprits.

They made demands during a human chain in front of the capital's Jatiya Press Club, organised by Domestic Worker's Rights Network (DWRN), said a press release.

The participants said rights violation of domestic workers has increased alarmingly in the country in recent years. Recently, two domestic workers faced violence in Dhaka and Cumilla.

They further said such incidents took place one after another as the country's "Domestic Workers' Protection and Welfare Policy, 2015," hasn't been implemented properly.

Besides, perpetrators feel encouraged to commit such violence time and again because of a culture of impunity in the country, they added.

DWRN acting coordinator Abul Hossain presided over the programme. Among others, Vice Chairman of Bangladesh Institute of Labour Studies Amirul Haque Amin; Executive President of Jatiya Sramik Jote Abdul Wahed; and acting General Secretary of Bangladesh Mukto Sramik Federation Shahidullah Badal were present.
