

135 arrested so far over attacks on Ahmadiyyas

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Thakurgaon

Some 135 people have so far been arrested in Panchagarh in connection with the attacks on the Ahmadiyya community there.

Police, however, did not reveal the identities of the arrestees.

Thirteen cases -- 11 with Panchagarh Police Station and two with Boda Police Station -- have been filed over the attacks, said police.

The Daily Star could confirm the identities of at least seven arrestees after talking to locals and police sources.

The list includes Fazle Rabbi, 30, joint convener of Panchagarh municipal unit Jubo Dal, and Rahimul Islam, 43, a leader of the local BNP and former chairman of Sonahar union parishad.

Mohammad Nasiruddin, 30, president of Tentulia upazila unit of Chhatura Shibir, Rabbi Emon, 26, activist of Chhatura Shibir in Satmara area, and Sofiul Alam Shwapan, 24, activist of Chhatura Shibir in Bhajpur area, said police sources.

The rest two are Ismail Hossain, 25, of South Rajnagar area, and Mohammad Rasel, 28, of Tularanga area in Panchagarh town.

In primary interrogation, Ismail and Rasel admitted their involvement with the attacks, said police sources.

Jamaat Shibir men were the masterminds of the attacks and many of them wore face masks to hide their identities during the attack, said SM Sirajul Huda, superintendent of Panchagarh police.

"The law enforcers have been conducting raids to arrest the culprits. We are identifying the attackers by scrutinising the footage. No innocent person will be harassed," said Huda.

"As all the members of law enforcement agencies in our district are under huge workload right now, we could not provide you [journalists] the names of the arrestees," he told The Daily Star yesterday.

Women first to suffer, last to be heard

UNSC hears on the eve of Int'l Women's Day

AFP, United Nations

Women are the primary victims of wars and conflict, yet they remain severely underrepresented at diplomatic negotiations, officials told the United Nations Security Council on Tuesday.

On the eve of International Women's Day yesterday, Sima Bahous, executive director of UN Women, called on the international community to do more to protect the lives, health and rights of women around the world.

"We must recall that we have neither significantly changed the composition of peace tables, nor the impunity enjoyed by those who commit atrocities against women and girls," Bahous told a UN Security Council debate on women, peace and security.

Bahous called out what she said was a "gender apartheid" in Afghanistan, where women have effectively been squeezed out of public life since the Taliban swept back into power in August 2021, banning women from attending universities, going to parks and removing them from many jobs.

"Afghanistan is one of the most extreme examples of regression in women's rights, but it is far from being the only one," Bahous said.

Turning to Russia's war against Ukraine, which is now into its second year, Bahous said that women and their children represent about 90 percent of the 8 million Ukrainians who have had to flee the country, while women and girls constitute nearly 70 percent of the millions displaced within Ukraine.

"Peace is the only answer, with women's engagement in the process," Bahous said as she urged world leaders to do right by the landmark UN Security Council Resolution passed in 2000, which highlighted the role of women in preventing and resolving conflicts.

US Ambassador Linda Thomas-

Greenfield echoed that sentiment.

"I will call attention to the violence and oppression of women and girls around the world and what they are facing -- in Iran, in Afghanistan, in areas of Ukraine occupied by Russia, and in so many other places around the world," she said.

French official Marlene Schiappa, who formerly served as her country's equality minister, said women pay the highest price in wars and crises.

"In all conflict and crisis situations, and to take current examples, in Ukraine, Yemen and Somalia, women are particularly affected, even deliberately targeted, by sexual and gender-based violence," Schiappa said. "Those responsible must answer for their actions."

Meanwhile, about 20 women held a rare demonstration in a Kabul street yesterday, calling on the international community to protect Afghans, AFP journalists witnessed.

UK cyber security firm warns over ChatGPT

AFP, London

British cyber security firm Darktrace yesterday warned that artificial intelligence bot ChatGPT may have increased the sophistication of phishing scams.

Content creation bot ChatGPT, Silicon Valley's latest app sensation, was launched by Microsoft backed start up OpenAI in November.

Darktrace does not believe that ChatGPT has yet lowered barriers to entry for threat actors significantly," the firm said in a results statement.

"But it does believe that it may have helped increase the sophistication of phishing emails, enabling adversaries to create more targeted, personalised, and ultimately, successful attacks."

Generative AI, of which ChatGPT is an example, can, upon request wade through reams of data to conjure up original content -- an image, a poem, a thousand-word essay -- in seconds.

ChatGPT had "ignited" a conversation about the implications of generative AI for cyber security", Darktrace noted yesterday.

It added however that email attacks on its customers were "steady" despite the release of ChatGPT, with a decline in the number of those containing malicious links.

Yet it warned that the "linguistic complexity" of those emails -- including punctuation, sentence length and text volume -- had increased.

"This indicates that cybercriminals may be redirecting their focus to crafting more sophisticated social engineering scams that exploit user trust."

Darktrace also revealed yesterday that its net profit sank 86 percent to $581 million in the first half of its financial year, or six months to December.

Its performance was slammed by surging costs and tax charges.

Darktrace shares rose 1.2 percent to 267.10 pence in London midday deals, but the stock is down 40 percent compared with the same stage last year.

The company, which uses cutting-edge artificial intelligence technology to combat cyber attacks, floated on the London stock market in 2021.

the most likely cause.

"But we don't rule out other possibilities. It could be triggered by something else," he said.

Mohammad Harun Or Rashid, additional commissioner of the Detective Branch, said the building was constructed in 1992. But the top floors were built years later.

"The garage is no longer a garage. Even the owner cannot say where the septic tank is," he told a press briefing.

He did not give a direct answer when asked whether the caretaker of the building was picked up.

The detectives are interrogating the owner, shop keepers, and others as they are conducting a shadow investigation, he said.

Family members of Abdul Motaleb Mintu, owner of a sanitaryware shop at the building, said DB officers picked him up from the Dhaka Medical College Hospital around 3:00am yesterday. He was at the hospital looking for a missing employee.

Mintu's cousin Anwar Hossain told The Daily Star that he was with Mintu when detectives took him.

But Mashru Rahman, deputy commissioner (Lalbagh) of DB, said no one was picked up.

a while, I immediately informed the Rapid Response Team and the hospital director about the arriving patients. They reached the emergency ward in about five minutes," Riaz Uddin told The Daily Star yesterday.

With many of the injured unidentified, the ward master had to give his phone number for tickets to be issued to them.

The 60-member Rapid Response Team and other staffers at the emergency ward made heroic efforts on Tuesday to serve the injured.

The team, comprised of 25 doctors, 20 nurses, and 15 ward boys, is responsible for handling emergency situations in the event of any disaster.

After the explosion at a building in the capital's Siddikbazar, at least 120 injured were brought to the DMCH for treatment.

"The Rapid Response Team successfully managed the situation by providing primary treatment and moving them to the departments concerned for further care," DMCH Director Brig Gen Md Nazmul Haque told The Daily Star.

Nazmul as the head of the Rapid Response Team was also present at the emergency ward.

He said the team is connected via WhatsApp group. It is alerted immediately after an emergency occurs, and the members respond as fast as possible.

Other physicians at the emergency ward also provided treatment to the injured, said Reaz Uddin.

"As a result, every patient received treatment on an urgent basis."

The ward master, who is himself a member of the Rapid Response Team, said the team has its own fund and stock of medical supplies, including medicines, blood, and equipment.

During an emergency, most of the injured brought to the hospital remain unidentified primarily and they don't have money either. The Rapid Response Team takes the responsibility of their treatment and pays for all necessary care, added Reaz Uddin.

The team transfers patients to other departments after providing primary care. For instance, if an injured needs ICU care, the patient would be sent to the ICU, and if another needs to undergo an operation, the patient would be moved to the OT, said hospital officials.

"There was no shortage of human resources or other logistics on Tuesday. We were instructed to use necessary resources as per our needs," the ward master said.

The Rapid Response Team has received a special training on handling patients during crisis situations and carrying out duties under time constraints. They also receive training once a month, and hold frequent meetings to discuss how to improve services.

At least 20 people were killed and more than 100 injured in Tuesday's explosion at a building in the capital's Siddikbazar.

About 150 doctors and staffers worked at the DMCH emergency ward, said Reaz Uddin.

explosion in Gulistan area on Tuesday, which has so far claimed 20 lives.

"Almost all of them are man-made disasters and could have been averted. But it seems we are careless and that's why we are paying the price."

Experts said the greed of building owners is a key reason for such disasters.

Many of them take advantage of poor monitoring by the authorities concerned and often change the approved design to make profits. Some even turn a residential building into a commercial one without following the necessary safety measures, they said.

Town planner Khandaker Niaz Rahman, who was the deputy team leader of the newly approved Detailed Area Plan, said different zones of the capital have exceeded the population density threshold, considering the infrastructure and social services available there.

Many believe the explosions at Science Laboratory and Gulistan were due to accumulated gas.

"That is one of the major reasons for the frequent accidents and disasters in Dhaka," he said, adding that the sheer negligence towards regulations was also a factor.

Two people died and several others were injured after a fire broke out at a multi-story building in Dhaka's Gulshan on February 19. Both of them died after they had jumped off the building.

Within two weeks, three people were killed and around 50 others injured in an explosion at a building in Science Laboratory area on March 5.

Two days later, at least 20 were killed and over 100 others injured in an explosion in Siddikbazar area.

Many believe the explosions at Science Laboratory and Gulistan were due to accumulated gas.

Mehedi Ahmed Ansari, professor of civil engineering at Buet, said even though Dhaka's vulnerability is multifaceted, the authorities remain virtually inactive.

"After big incidents -- from the Rana Plaza tragedy to the Churihatta blaze -- a number of recommendations were made by experts. But none of those were implemented till now."

He said every building's fire safety, electrical safety, and structural safety must be inspected before issuing the occupancy certificate, which has to be renewed by the building owner every five years.

"To check those, Rajuk [Rajdhani Unnayan Kartripakkha] can give the task to a third party. If those are inspected and measures taken based on the inspection, the risk of accidents will come down drastically," he said, adding that coordination among government agencies is key to improving the situation.

"We have been making recommendations since 2010 but the process is yet to start. It's time to start right away."

US announces $26m in new aid for Rohingyas

AFP, Washington

The United States announced on Tuesday $26 million in new humanitarian aid for Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh and elsewhere in that region of Asia.

Around one million members of the mostly Muslim Rohingya community live in squalid relief camps in Bangladesh, many after fleeing a 2017 military crackdown in neighboring Myanmar.

"This new funding allows our humanitarian partners to continue providing life-saving assistance to affected communities on both sides of the Burma-Bangladesh border," State Department spokesman Ned Price said, using the old name for Myanmar.

He said the new money raises to $2.1 billion the total of US aid provided to the Rohingya people since August 2017.

Man held over question paper leak

STAFF CORRESPONDENT, Rajshahi

Police have arrested a man for his alleged involvement in leaking question papers and faking admit cards for various recruitment and admission tests.

Immigration Police in Benapole arrested Nayan Islam, 25, on Monday, said police at a press conference at Rajshahi Metropolitan Police (RMP) headquarters yesterday afternoon.

The Detective Branch of RMP started investigating into a case in February last year and identified a fraud gang who were operating from the city.

Police issued a red alert against Nayan and several others across the country in late February.
