Tk 50,000 for migrant workers

However, this benefit will not be applicable for those whose full migration cost will be borne by the employer, according to the insurance policy.

The government yesterday upgraded the compulsory "Probashi Karmi Bima" keeping this clause. An agreement in this regard was signed between the ministry's Wage Earners' Welfare Board and state-owned Jiban Bima Corporation (JBC) at Probashi Kalyan Bhaban.

Ahmed Munir Salheen, senior secretary of expatriates' welfare ministry, said JBC agreed on the clause although there is no data on how many migrants return home each year jobless.

Unavoidable situations may arise, and for this, the ministry came up with measures like insurance coverage, he said.

Under the insurance, a maximum of Tk 10 lakh will be paid for the death of a migrant worker due to an accident. The timespan for the insurance will be five years, and migrant workers, aged between 18 and 55, have to pay a one-time Tk 1,000 as premium to come under its coverage.

The total amount will also be given in case of different organ losses of migrant workers.

Expatriates' Welfare Minister Imran Ahmad said in many cases, the ministry, through the welfare board, has to provide financial support for treatment of ailing migrant workers.

He urged local insurance companies to find a policy to bring migrant workers under health insurance coverage while they are working abroad. Besides, the ministry will consider if any foreign insurance company comes up with a proposal in this regard.

Mizanul Hoque Chowdhury, managing director of JBC, said from December 1, 2019 till January this year, about 20.53 lakh migrant workers have come under the insurance coverage.

Credible polls

Noting that the Ukraine-Russia war has created immense challenges of food and energy security, she said there is a higher need of cooperation on these aspects. Yesterday, Trevelyan and Bangladesh State Minister for Foreign Affairs Shabriar Alam signed the UK Bangladesh Climate Accord, which aims to enhance cooperation in climate action bilaterally and multilaterally, to help deliver the outcomes of COP26 and COP27.

Meanwhile, Momen at a meeting with Trevelyan said the next election will be held transparently and fairly, reports UNB.

"You don't need to worry about it. We want to hold a free, fair, transparent, credible, and acceptable election," he said.

Attacks on Ahmadiyya

Fakhrul said they formed the probe committee led by party vice chairman Hafizuddin Ahmed.

He said the committee visited the violence-hit area on Wednesday and prepared the report after talking to victims, locals and relevant stakeholders.

Fakhrul said police have already arrested 181 and continuing their drive to arrest others. "We think the government is conducting wholesale arrest only to hide the real offenders."

Hafizuddin said some victims also gave them the names of some perpetrators. "But their names are not in the cases. When the railways minister went to the spot, the victims told him [the minister] that those who set fire to houses were with him."

The pleasure

teachers cheer them on, again, in an informal setting. The best part -- you never know who you might run into while they're on a jog, or just taking a stroll on the way home.

While book fairs and street festivals come alive during a specific time of the year, the recent opening up for public spaces to residents in the form of bookstores, cafes, weekend readings and runs -- however small an effort -- brings the promise of community interaction the year round. It works marvels on mental health after a tiring work day, on a weekend that ends up feeling invigorating, on a random week day when you're trying to recover from a tragedy or from mundane stress.

This isn't a Dhaka I have met in a long time. As a professional, one gets to meet people from across industries and social backgrounds, but such is life in Dhaka that we seldom know our neighbours. Efforts such as these helping my corner of this vast and overcrowded city feel more like home.
