Calls for protests to ‘get our nation back’

AFP, New York

Former US President Donald Trump said he expects to be “arrested” on Tuesday over hush money allegedly paid to a porn star before the 2016 election, calling on his supporters to protest.

Citing a “leak” from the Manhattan district attorney’s office, Trump wrote on his Truth Social platform this morning: “Leading Republican candidate & former President of the United States of America will be arrested on Tuesday of next week. Protest, take our nation back!”

The investigation centres on USD 130,000 paid weeks before the 2016 polls to stop Stormy Daniels, whose real name is Stephanie Clifford, from going public about an affair she says she had with Trump years earlier.

Prosecutors are weighing whether to charge Trump in the case, and speculation is rife that an indictment is likely.

If the Manhattan district attorney were to indict Trump, the 76-year-old would become the first former president to be charged with a crime. That would also upend his bid to win the Republican nomination for the 2024 presidential election.

Trump’s lawyer told CNBC on Friday evening that his client would surrender to face criminal charges if he was indicted by a Manhattan grand jury.

Trump has denied having an affair with Daniels and has dismissed the investigation as politically motivated.

In his post, written in capital letters, Trump referred to “illegal leaks from a corrupt & highly political Manhattan district attorneys office” and said the investigation was “based on an old & fully debunked (by numerous other prosecutors!) fairytale.”

Daniels met with prosecutors on Wednesday and “agreed to make herself available as a witness, or for further inquiry if needed,” according to her lawyer Charles Brewster.

Earlier this month, Trump was given the opportunity to testify by District Attorney Alvin Bragg’s team but declined to avoid potentially incriminating himself. Experts say the invitation is a sign that he will almost certainly be charged.

Biden: Putin committed war crimes Calls ICC charges against him justified

REUTERS, Washington

US President Joe Biden said on Friday that Russian President Vladimir Putin has clearly committed war crimes and the International Criminal Court’s (ICC) decision to issue an arrest warrant for him was justified.

The ICC earlier on Friday called for Putin’s arrest on suspicion of unlawful deportation of children and unlawful transfer of people from Ukraine to Russia since Moscow’s invasion began of its neighbor last year. The United States is not a member of the ICC.

“He’s clearly committed war crimes,” Biden told reporters, referring to Putin.

“Well, I think it’s justified,” Biden added, referring to the warrant. “But the question is - it’s not recognized internationally by us either. But I think it makes a very strong point.”

The United States separately has concluded that Russian forces have committed war crimes in Ukraine and supports accountability for perpetrators of war crimes, a State Department spokesperson said in an emailed statement.

North Korea says 800,000 people enlist to fight ‘US imperialists’

AFP, Seoul

More than 800,000 young North Koreans have volunteered to join the army to fight “US imperialists”, state media said Saturday, days after Pyongyang test-fired its most powerful intercontinental ballistic missile.

After a record-breaking year of weapons tests and growing nuclear threats from Pyongyang, Seoul and Washington have ramped up security cooperation, and this week kicked off their largest joint military drills in five years.

North Korea views all such exercises as rehearsals for invasion and has repeatedly warned it would take “overwhelming” action in response.

The official Korean Central News Agency described the ongoing drills as an American attempt “to provoke a nuclear war” and said that in response, hundreds of thousands of

OC Mohammad Emranul Islam said, “We arrested hospital manager Nazmul Hossain, and staffers Arif and Joy.”

Meanwhile, after the news of Iqram’s death spread, his classmates ransacked the hospital. Later, police brought the situation under control.

Afterwards, locals formed a human chain in front of Brahmanbaria Press Club in protest.

According to the complaint, Iqram was admitted to the ear, nose and throat department of the hospital on Friday for the purpose of nasal polypus surgery.

Following the surgery, he did not regain consciousness and was sent to the hospital bed in critical condition.

Then he was taken back to the OT after objection from the patient’s relatives. But the patient did not regain consciousness and later, without informing his relatives, he was transferred to Brahmanbaria ICU Specialized Hospital.

At that time, the authorities of Al-

Khalil hospital fled, the complaint said.

The specialised hospital authorities informed the family that Iqram had died during a 15-hour unconsciousness state from Friday afternoon to yesterday morning.

Iqram’s classmates and locals alleged that he was admitted to Al-Khalil hospital to get the surgery done by a doctor who used to go there from Dhaka once a week.

However, another doctor conducted the surgery, they said, adding that Iqram died due to a lack of proper treatment.

Since the hospital was locked after the incident, it was not possible to contact the doctor or any of the authorities, it stated.

The hospital ward master Emdad Hossain told The Daily Star, “I have heard about the incident. But since last February 27, I have been on sick leave. So, I cannot say anything about it. The arrestees – who were staying at the hospital after the incident – can tell the details.”

Khalilur Bashir Manik, founder chairman of the hospital, couldn’t be contacted as his phone was found switched off.

For its many critics, the war was exposed as a reckless misadventure when no weapons of mass destruction were found, and hampered the West’s ability to stand up to the rise of autocrats in Russia and China.

But Blair rejects the notion that Russian President Vladimir Putin profited by defying a weakened West with his own aggression against Ukraine, starting in 2014 and extending to last year’s full invasion.

Former UK prime minister Tony Blair is by turns pensive and defiant as he reflects on the upcoming anniversaries of two events that arguably defined the best and worst of his decade in power.

Monday marks 20 years since Blair joined US president George W. Bush in launching an invasion of Saddam Hussein’s Iraq, without a UN mandate and in defiance of some of the biggest demonstrations ever seen in Britain.

most successful Labour leader, who is now 69, said in an interview with AFP and fellow European news agencies ANSA, DPA and EFE.

Saddam, Blair noted, had initiated two regional wars, defied multiple UN resolutions and launched a chemical attack on his own people.

Ukraine in contrast has a democratic government and posed no threat to its neighbours when Putin invaded.

“At least you could say we were removing a despot and trying to introduce democracy,” Blair said, speaking at the offices of his Tony Blair Institute for Global Change in central London.

“Now you can argue about all the consequences and so on.

“His (Putin’s) intervention in the Middle East (in Syria) was to prop up a despot and refuse a democracy. So we should treat all that propaganda with the lack of respect it deserves.”

Fallout from the Iraq war arguably hampered Blair’s own efforts as an international envoy to negotiate peace between Israel and the Palestinians, after he left office in 2007.

Through his institute, Blair maintains offices in the region and says he is “still very passionate” about promoting peace in the Middle East, even if it appears “pretty distant right now”.

But while there can be no settlement in Ukraine until Russia recognises that “aggression is wrong”, he says the Palestinians could draw lessons from the undisputed high point of his tenure: peace in Northern Ireland.

Mountain forests disappearing at alarming rate: study

AFP, Washington

Logging, wildfires and farming are causing mountain forests, habitat to 85 percent of the world’s birds, mammals and amphibians, to vanish at an alarming rate, according to a study published on Friday.

Mountain forests covered 1.1 billion hectares of the planet in 2000, the authors of the study published in the Cell Press journal One Earth said.

But at least 78.1 million hectares – an area larger than the US state of Texas – have been lost between 2000 and 2018, with recent losses 2.7-fold greater than at the beginning of the century.

Key drivers of the loss are commercial logging, wildfires, “slash-and-burn” cultivation and commodity agriculture, said the authors from China’s Southern University of Science and Technology and the University of Leeds.

Of particular concern, they said, is that heavy forest losses have occurred in mountain areas that are “tropical biodiversity hotspots” – refuges for rare and endangered species. High elevations and steep slopes have restricted human exploitation of mountain forests, the authors said. But they have increasingly been targeted for timber and used for agriculture since the turn of the century.

Commercial forestry was responsible for 42 percent of mountain forest loss, followed by wildfires (29 percent), shifting cultivation (15 percent), and permanent or semi-permanent commodity agriculture (10 percent), the study said.
