Is hajj package not against public interest?

HC asks authorities

BSS, Dhaka

The High Court yesterday issued a rule asking why the hajj package announced by the government this year should not be declared to be against public interest.

The HC bench of Justice KM Kamrul Kader and Justice Mohammad Ali issued the rule.

The court also wanted to know why other airlines besides Biman and Saudi Airlines are not included in the list of airlines for booking tickets for hajj, keeping the affordability of the pilgrims in mind.

Religious Affairs Secretary, Civil Aviation and Tourism Secretary, Director General of the Islamic Foundation and Hajj Association of Bangladesh have been asked to respond to the rule within the next four weeks.

On March 6, Supreme Court lawyer and chief coordinator of Al Quran Study Center Ashraf Uz Zaman sent a legal notice to the government to review the hajj package price and set it at Tk 4 lakh.

The notice -- which stated that legal action will be taken against the authorities concerned if they don't take necessary steps within a week -- was also sent to the religious affairs ministry.

The government fixed the cost of hajj for the current year at Tk 6.83 lakh. On the other hand, the minimum cost for hajj pilgrims under private management (without qurbani) has been set at Tk 6.72 lakh. With the announced packages, a pilgrim will have to spend around 1.5 lakh taka extra this year, compared to the previous year's budget.

Mirpur Road's bustling SHOPPING SCENE

RBR

As your car inches towards Dhaka College on Mirpur Road, you start to peek here and there assessing the shopping deals. The place is teeming with thousands of early Eid shoppers or random bargain hunters, all looking for the best offers before the festival.

No matter where in the world you stay and how many fancy shopping boulevards you have been to, a Bangalee needs to go to their favourite four corners of the shopping world -- Gawsia, New Market, Hawkers, and the all-important Chandni Chawk, with Priyangan Shopping Center and Doza Market on the sides -- when in Dhaka and during festive times.

For a fitting blouse, that particular shade of pink lace, the soft linens for housecoats, or that beautiful embroidery on the panjabi collar -- you need to go to Gawsia or Chandni Chawk at least a few times, especially during Ramadan. The mood in this part of the city is always festive, but come Ramadan, the shopping festivity turns to a frenzy.

Women and men equally flock to these areas for variation and affordable prices.

A three-piece set from Chandni Chawk, matching jewellery from the footpaths, and a slipper can complete your morning look for Eid day -- that too under Tk 1,500! You can venture out to the second storey for more expensive options to choose from for your evening wear. Walking toward the yardage shops in Chandni Chawk, you bargain for a white chikankari fabric for Tk 800 per yard for your exclusive Eid panjabi. You will be relieved to know that these shops will relay your orders with the tailor in Chandni Chawk.

Doza Market is a haven for affordable, good-quality buys. From ladies' tops and trousers to children's clothes, men's shorts and t-shirts for casual use, you name it and you get it under Tk 2,000.

If you venture towards Priyangan to look for more panjabi or shalwar kameez options, the shops are lively with fashionable dresses featuring sequin work, dazzling borders, zari work, and so much more.

If you are done with your wardrobe purchases, and your interest is now on household accessories, then you most definitely should walk towards the rear of New Market and stop at the Singapore Market. Electronic appliances, barbeque stoves, pizza or dosa pans, blenders, non-stick woks, chopping boards, crockery, and cutlery; no matter how long your list is you will find it there. It's a treasure trove for household goods.

The vegetable market behind New Market is also a rendezvous for food purchases; unroasted cashew nuts, almonds, pistachios, chia seeds, exotic masala powder like asafoetida, special garam masala -- the list can be stretched as much as you desire. Also available are ripe tamarinds wrapped in banana leaves, fancy herbs like celery, sweet basil, salad leaves, and the must-buy loose orange pekoe tea leaves.

Shopping in this part of the city is fun. You get everything in one space and within walking distance -- tailors, embroiders, to grocers are all included.

Chandraat shopping in this vicinity will give you a rush like no other. Traffic though is a damper but the experience is worth it.

SWADHINATA STAMBHA PROJECT
New installations to be proposed to enrich Suhrawardy Udyan

DWAIPAYAN BARUA

The Swadhinata Stambha (Independence Monument, third phase) project is going to see a number of new changes and additions to its original plan, as authorities plan to install a variety of structures at Suhrawardy Udyan, the historic site that witnessed significant moments of the country's journey towards liberation.

A revision proposal of the project will be placed at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Economic Council (Ecne) tomorrow.

For example, the government has decided to install bronze sculptures of Bangabandhu delivering his March 7 speech, as well as the surrender of Pakistani occupation forces, at the Udyan, instead of the previously planned concrete sculptures.

This proposal, along with others, seeks to increase the estimated cost of the project to Tk 397 crore, from its original estimation of Tk 265 crore.

If the proposal is approved, the project's implementation period will be extended by four and a half years, till June 2024, according to documents from the planning division.

Among the new things which will be set up in the area under phase three are holographic 3D instalments of the March 7 speech, light and sound show on Liberation War, and various forms of water fountains at entry and exit space of underground parking.

The new components also include two passenger lifts at car parking, fire hydrant, walkway lights, glass canopy for the underpass, glass boundary wall, Ansar camp and a police station.

Three toilet spaces will also be constructed inside the underground parking for the convenience of drivers.
