STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh embassy in Sudan and the acting ambassador Tarek Ahmed’s residence in Khartoum came under attack on April 15, forcing Tarek to move to a safe place, sources at the foreign ministry said.

Bullets from machine guns hit the ambassador’s residence on April 15, the initial days of the conflicts that began between Sudan’s military and paramilitary forces.

A foreign ministry official said the Bangladesh embassy building on April 22 was hit by machine gun bullets. There were no casualties.

DEFAMATION CONVICTION Rahul Gandhi appeals after court denies stay

REUTERS, New Delhi

Indian opposition leader Rahul Gandhi yesterday appealed to the High Court in the western state of Gujarat seeking a stay of conviction in a defamation case, challenging a lower court’s ruling against his plea, his lawyer said.

Gandhi was convicted last month in a case brought by a state lawmaker from the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) after comments he made that were deemed to be insulting to Prime Minister Narendra Modi and other people surnamed Modi.

The 52-year old scion of India’s Congress party was sentenced to two years’ imprisonment. His petition seeking a stay of conviction was rejected last week.

“We have filed an appeal challenging the Surat district court’s order,” Gandhi’s lawyer, Pankaj Champaneri, told Reuters.

Gandhi also lost his parliamentary seat following the conviction since lawmakers sentenced to jail terms of two years or more are automatically disqualified and barred from running for election.

His sentence will remain suspended until he exhausts all legal challenges.

Two more defamation cases have also been filed against Gandhi elsewhere in India relating to the same comment.

Indubala Bhaater Hotel – a web series on the OTT platform Hoichoi – is the current craze. I will not discuss the storyline in detail but let’s just say that it leaves you with a nostalgic pull for lost worlds and makes you realise how a woman can evolve through troubled times.

The city’s vegetarian EATERIES

RBR

I would, however, discuss the vegetarian dishes that played a supporting role in the series. A taro root mash or “kochu bhorta” in coconut shavings – mixed with mustard oil – is the recipe that saves Indubala and popularises her hotel. How a small portion of this special kochu bhorta and piping hot rice fills both the hearts and stomachs of the castaways and the regular people is what captured my imagination.

I took it upon myself to find restaurants like Indubala Bhaater Hotel in Dhaka, serving simple no-fuss vegetarian dishes like aubergine burnt in a coal fire and mixed with “aam tel” or mango pickle oil. It’s hard to find an exact match of the drama setting but there are a few restaurants in equally dreamy locations.

One is Jatra Biroti on Kemal Ataturk Avenue in Banani. It is a multi-purpose event space/art lounge and vegetarian restaurant serving exotic dishes like eggplant korma, cauliflower rezala, and wood-apple drinks. Give their vegetables a try and eat mushroom tehari, niramish (veg), and begun bhaji – their specialties.

Faiza Ahmed, food visionary and vegan chef, owner of Shanchayita, a restaurant in Mohakhali DOHS, has the most amazing vegan spread in town. Her popular meals are vegan dam biriyani served with cabbage pakora, a comfort runny veggie khichuri platter served with sour eggplant and lentil fritters, boukhudi or broken rice dish with three local mashes of lentil, dry red chilli, and yummy peanut.

The most popular snack is batata puri (batata means potato in Portuguese). This is one of those classic mashed potato, onion, chilli, and cilantro concoctions topped with a tamarind sauce. This is served on crispy wheat chips.

The desserts available are vegan peanut laddu with no oil and no dairy, semolina halwa with date jaggery, and narikel (coconut) puli.

Faiza’s pickles are to die for and add that much-needed oomph to the food – dry jujube pickle, mango rasya, and Kartik jaitun pickle. She has a private dine-in facility, where you need to make reservations first and enjoy a cosy meal. Faiza also takes 8 to 15 takeout orders a day. A very niche clientele is attracted to this beautiful restaurant.

There are a few more options of vegetarian and vegan eateries in town, but ISKCON Dhaka at Swami Bagh and Vishnupriya Vojanalay – a vegetarian restaurant in Kowtali Road, old Dhaka also has their loyal vegetarian regulars.

So, during this scorching Dhaka summer time do yourself a favour and have organic vegetarian dishes for a change. Popularise greens in Dhaka especially after coming out of the Eid food coma.

WB to give

“The recent energy crisis in Bangladesh underlines the vulnerability of the sector due to high dependency on fossil fuels,” it said.

Along with the new CPF, the WB board with authorise budget support of $500 million and a new project of $250 million.

During the PM’s visit, $1.53 billion of loan agreements for three projects will also be signed.

A daylong programme will be held on May 1 at the WB headquarters in Washington DC where the lender would be showcasing the outcome of its collaboration with Bangladesh, which has enabled the country to achieve lower middle-income status only within four decades of its independence.

Hasina would also be speaking at the meeting of the WB board of directors and participating in a panel discussion.

She will also meet with Ajay Banga, the incoming president of the World Bank Group, and Kristalina Georgieva, the managing director of the International Monetary Fund.

Another power price hike likely by June and electricity. Who drives cars? Who consumes air conditioning? It is not the poor, it’s the rich people. Those people do not deserve the subsidy they are getting in the context of a country going through a fiscal problem,” said Krishna Srinivasan, director of the IMF’s Asia-Pacific department, in an interaction with Bangladeshi journalists in New Delhi earlier in February.

Blanket subsidies also limit how much the government can support social safety net programmes and infrastructure spending.

Subsequently, the lender insists on providing targeted subsidies and not blanket subsidies or blanket tax exemptions.

A record Tk 81,000 crore was earmarked for subsidy expenses in the original budget for this fiscal year. In the revised budget, another

Tk 21,000 crore had to be made available.

But for the common people grappling with a cost of living crisis, a fourth electricity price hike in six months might be a step too far.

In the first nine months of fiscal 2022-23, inflation averaged 8.81 percent, way above the budgetary target of 5.6 percent, according to data from the Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics. In March, inflation stood at 9.33 percent, the highest in seven months.

The finance ministry officials have also informed the staff mission that it would be difficult to meet June’s target for net international reserves (NIR), one of the three mandatory conditions for the release of the next tranche of the loan.

The IMF stipulated a minimum NIR of $24.46 billion on June 30.

On March 30, it was less than $22 billion – and missing the IMF’s floor of $22.95 billion for March, The Daily Star has learnt from finance ministry officials involved with the proceedings.

Meanwhile, BB officials informed the staff mission that the central bank is on track to introduce a market-determined exchange rate for all official foreign exchange transactions and interest rate corridor by June, as sought by the Washington-based multilateral lender.

“We have almost arrived at a position to introduce a single exchange rate,” Md. Mezbaul Haque, BB spokesman, told reporters yesterday.

The monetary policy that would be announced in July would reflect many of the recommendations such as reporting on foreign exchange reserves as per the IMF’s BPM6 manual, he said.

Earlier in the morning, President Shahabuddin received the maiden ceremonial salute at the southwestern part of the Credential Ground of the Bangabhaban.

Family members and Bangabhaban officials witnessed the ceremony held at around 10:30am, reports BSS.

President Shahabuddin’s family members, including wife Dr Rebecca Sultana and son Arshad Adnan Roni, arrived at the Bangabhaban around 8:50pm on Monday in a motorcade from his Gulshan residence.

On his arrival at the Bangabhaban, a contingent of the horse-mounted PGR welcomed the president at the main gate.

From there, they took them to the main building gate, where he was greeted with flowers by the officials and employees of the presidential palace.

Fix it all, avoid disaster sudden rise of gas pressure. “But this [Monday’s] incident proves they do not have this system.”

Over the past few years, there were a number of fire or blast incidents caused by accumulated gas in homes, industries, and markets.

Iqbal Habib, joint secretary of Bangladesh Paribesh Andolon, said Monday’s leaks could have caused serious accidents.

He warned that if the leaks are not fixed immediately, incidents like that in Narayanganj and Moghbazar may happen again.

Another energy expert, Md Maqbul E Elahi Chowdhury said mixing odorant was a good initiative that alerted people about the leaked gas on Monday.

By using an odorant, it is possible to identify 80 to 85 percent leaks, he added.

Odorant is chemical additive that is mixed into natural gas to create an artificial smell. It serves as a warning in the detection of natural gas in the air when there is a leak.

“But Titas is not using it regularly in its entire network,” said Maqbul.

“Titas should repair all the leaks of the distribution network immediately to avert accidents,” added Maqbul, a former director of Petrobangla.

Titas Gas Transmission and Distribution Company is the biggest distributor of pipeline gas in the country with 7,000km of lines in Dhaka alone and 28.57 lakh domestic connections across the country.

However, most of the pipes in the city are around 40 years old and the distribution network has developed many leaks.

In a survey conducted on a 1,682km pipeline in Dhaka in fiscal 2021-22, Titas detected 985 leaks at 449 points. Titas officials claimed that they have repaired those.

But experts said had Titas conducted a survey on the rest of the network, they would have found a lot more leaks.

Asked about Monday’s leaks, Titas Managing Director Md Harunur Rashid Mollah said these were very minor.

The leaks are not repairable but not risky, he added.

“The smell has spread as we have used odorant. But these were very minor leaks which increased due to the pressure of gas and again it reduced when we have reduced the gas pressure,” he said.

“We are regularly fixing the leaks which are repairable.”

Rashid further claimed no pipeline in Dhaka city is risky and there is no chance of explosion.

An official of Titas said illegal gas connections and damage of the gas pipelines by other utility service providers are mainly responsible for the leaks.

Titas has identified 60 areas in Dhaka and Narayanganj where old and narrow gas pipes need to be changed to solve the problem of leaks and low gas pressure.

“A DPP has already been sent to the ministry concerned in this regard. Once we get the approval, we will start our work,” said the MD of Titas.
