Rescued slow loris finds home

OUR CORRESPONDENT, Moulvibazar

In a rescue mission in Moulvibazar's Sreemangal yesterday morning, a weak slow loris was rescued and subsequently released after treatment at Satchhari National Park.

Swapan Deb
Sajal, director of the animal
care foundation, confirmed the news to our correspondent.

Sajal said the slow loris had apparently lost its way and sought refuge in Phulchhara Banglow.

Receiving the news, the wildlife officials rescued it.

Following a medical examination and treatment, the slow loris was handed over to the forest department.

"This particular slow loris seemed extremely weak, primarily due to a lack of food," said Swapan.

The slow loris, resembling a lemur, is a creature found across Southeast Asia.

The species is currently categorised as endangered on the IUCN Red List of threatened wildlife, said Shyamal Kumar Mitra, assistant conservator of Forests in Wildlife Management and Nature Conservation Department in Moulvibazar.

It prefers rainforests with dense canopies, and its presence in its native habitat indicates a healthy ecosystem.

"However, with the declining availability of the food sources, the survival of the species is being threatened," Shahidul said.
