Spectre of deadliest dengue year looms

Experts blame the outbreak on Dhaka city corporations' failure to take early measures

HELEML ALAM

The Dhaka city corporations seem to have learned little from the past when it comes to controlling Aedes mosquitoes, as early measures were not taken to avert this year's deadly dengue outbreak, experts say.

According to the Directorate General of Health Services (DGHS), six people died and 1,424 others were hospitalised in the 24 hours till yesterday morning.

With the new numbers, 106 people have died in total, while the number of recorded dengue patients rose to 20,878 since the beginning of this year.

Different city hospitals are grappling with the influx of dengue patients.

With the viral disease yet to hit its peak, which normally takes place in August-September, entomologists and medical experts fear that the numbers of patients and deaths may cross those of 2019, when 1,01,354 people were infected and 179 died – the deadliest dengue year so far.

Once a seasonal fever, dengue has turned into an all-year-long phenomenon since 2014, in the absence of necessary measures to control Aedes mosquitoes – carrier of the dengue and chikungunya viruses – during the November-March.

"The impact of climate change has also made Bangladesh dengue-prone throughout the year."

Entomologist
Kabirul Bashar

This is the period when mosquito distribution and breeding are low due to drier seasons.

Entomologist Manzur A Chowdhury said that inaction during this period has led to the disproportional rise in Aedes population this year.

"For the past 20 years, we see that activities to kill Aedes mosquitoes increase during the outbreaks, but all initiatives stop once the disease subsides," he told The Daily Star.

Tigers win first T20I series against Afghans

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

A collective approach saw Bangladesh clinch their maiden T20I bilateral series against Afghanistan following a six-wicket victory in the rain-curtailed second match at the Sylhet International Cricket Stadium yesterday.

The energetic Sylhet crowd enjoyed some dominating display from the Bangladesh bowlers up front as Taskin Ahmed, who picked up his 50th T20I wicket during the game, removed both Rahmanullah Gurbaz and Hazratullah Zazai upfront.

Following a rain delay of over an hour, Shakib Al Hasan led from the front with his captaincy and also with the ball, picking up two wickets while conceding only 15 runs from three overs as Afghanistan were restricted to 116 for seven in 17 overs.
