'Rubel was killed by his cohorts'

10 held over Jubo League leader murder in Shahjahanpur

SHARIFUL ISLAM

Oliullah Rubel

Nibir, Md Shahjalal, and former Shahjahanpur thana Chhatra League leader Oliullah Rubel were known to be close friends and notorious for extorting hawkers on footpaths, and operating goat markets in Malibagh.

However, their friendship deteriorated when Nibir and Shahjalal discovered that Rubel had been operating a goat market without their involvement and withheld the profits during the occasion of Eid ul Azha.

Enraged by this "betrayal", they devised a plan to murder Rubel.

Nibir and Shahjalal then hired a killer, Habib Ahsan. They paid him Tk 5,000 to buy two machetes.

Nibir then left for the US before Eid and remained in contact with Habib as they set the plan in motion.

On July 21, Habib and another person attacked Rubel with the purchased machetes, and he succumbed to the injuries soon after.

Habib revealed the details of the crime in a court hearing before a metropolitan magistrate in Dhaka yesterday.

"Nibir contacted me an hour before the attack, while Shahjalal met me in person an hour after," he added.

Meanwhile, law enforcers have arrested 10 persons in 'Their feats have been forgotten'

Prof Serajul Islam tells memorial lecture on Haider Anwar Khan Juno

DU CORRESPONDENT

The Chattogram Youth Revolution of 1930 stands as a shining example of communal harmony between Hindus and Muslims, surpassing other anti-British movements of its time, said speakers at a programme yesterday.

They were speaking at the first "Haider Anwar Khan Juno Memorial Lecture", held at Dhaka University's RC Majumdar Auditorium.

The 1930 Youth Revolution was the topic of the discussion.

During the event, Dhaka

University Professor Emeritus Serajul Islam Choudhury said, "The secular ideology embraced by Master Da Surja Sen, the leader of the movement, united people from both communities in their pursuit of shared goals."

"Figures like Surja Sen and Pritilata have made our past glorious. Their remarkable feats have largely been forgotten in history," he added.

Speaking on Haider Anwar Khan Juno, a noted freedom fighter, cultural activist and one of the most prominent communist leaders, he said, "We

Secondary school teachers continue sit-in for nationalisation

ARAFAT RAHAMAN

Hundreds of secondary school teachers have been protesting in front of Jatiya Press Club for the past two weeks, demanding nationalisation of secondary educational institutions.

Two meetings -- one with Directorate of Secondary and Higher Education and another with Education Minister Dipu Moni -- have also been held to resolve the matter.

However, the issue is yet to be solved.

Termining the meeting with Dipu Moni "unfruitful", teachers continue to protest over the "discrimination" in salaries among those appointed in government schools and those registered under the monthly pay order (PMO) who are currently serving in privately-run institutions.

"We joined with the same qualification as the teachers in government schools. But they receive higher salaries and more financial benefits," said Bhabesh Chandra Dhali from Khulna's Koyra upazila.

Entry-level teachers in private schools receive a basic salary of Tk 12,500 with an additional Tk 1,000 as rent, Tk 500 as medical allowance, and 25 percent of their basic salary as festival bonuses, informed Obaidur Rahman, headteacher of Damukdia Durgapur Abdul Aziz High School.

However, teachers at government schools get 16,000 as basic, 45 percent of this as house rent and a medical allowance of Tk 1,500 per month. They also get full basic salary as festival allowances, he said.

"We have been pressing this demand for a long time but to no avail. We won't leave the road until our demand is met," he asserted.

This discrimination has compelled many to resort to a secondary profession,

Shadowy secrets of a footbridge

Without rehabilitation, street children find themselves caught in a cycle of drug addiction

DIPAN NANDY

A young boy sits on a footbridge with a worn-out polythene bag clutched tightly in his hands. His eyes reflect a haunting emptiness instead of being filled with curiosity. Soon his vision gets blurred as he starts sniffing the pack.

His footsteps uneven, skin tanned and shrunken. His body craves food while his mind is full of agony and uncertainty.

His name is Asad (pseudonym). He is 10 years old.

Asad has been living on the streets of Dhaka since his mother abandoned him. But he does not remember when exactly that happened.

"I have never seen my father, and my mother left me on the streets after she remarried," he told this correspondent.

He said he visits this footbridge every evening, where many kids of his age gather.

The Tejuri Para footbridge and the space surrounding it have transformed into a den of drug abuse, particularly for street children. Among these destitute youngsters, glue-sniffing has emerged as a prevalent and alarming practice.

Commonly referred to as "dandy," the adhesive glue used by shoe repairers contains toluene, a sweet-smelling and intoxicating hydrocarbon. This solvent, while temporarily providing a respite from their harsh realities, inflicts severe damage on their developing minds.

For children like Asad, the sinister allure of the footbridge has become a daily refuge from their relentless sorrows. They flock to this location after the hawkers, who occupy the space during the day, leave in the evening.

However, some of the children can also be seen sleeping over the bridge during the day.

Trapped between the perils of addiction and the absence of a stable home, these young addicts often resort to criminal activities such as theft and robbery to secure funds needed to sustain their drug habits, according to experts.

The majority of these children are minors, meaning they can't be arrested or detained by the law enforcers. With limited resources available to support their rehabilitation and reintegration into
