EC workshops on role of polling agents October 4

Plans two more sessions with law enforcers, administration

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

The Election Commission will conduct another round of workshops on October 4 on the role of polling agents nominated by candidates in ensuring free and fair voting.

Three former CECs or ECs, three former EC officials, three academics and three media personalities are expected to join the workshop, Election Commissioner Ahsan Habib Khan said yesterday.

People often blame the EC for a poor election, but in reality, elections are a collective effort involving the EC, political parties, candidates, election officials, voters, polling agents, and more, said EC Ahsan Habib.

If the polling agents can play an effective role, it can significantly reduce election irregularities, he said.

Former CEC ATM Shamsul Huda, former ECs Md Shah Nawaz and Kabita Khanam, former vice-chancellor of Bangladesh National University Harun-or-Rashid, Dhaka University professors Robaet Ferdous and SM Shameem Reza, former EC officials Jesmin Tuli and Nuruzzaman Taludkar are expected to join.

An election commissioner said they have plans to hold two more workshops on the role of law enforcers and local administrations. The decision will be finalised after October 4, he added.

Earlier, the EC held a workshop on September 14 in which eminent citizens said the next general election will have to be free, fair and at the same time participatory and competitive.

show cause notices to 4
officials

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Dhaka South City Corporation has issued show-cause notices to four officials for failing to solve the waterlogging problem in the capital's New Market and surrounding areas within 24 hours of Thursday night's heavy rain.

DSCC Public Relations officer Abu Nasher confirmed this to The Daily Star yesterday.

They were found to be negligent in performing their duties, he said.

The officials are: Assistant Chief Waste Management Officer Mohammad Asghar, Waste Management Officer Mohammad Selim Miah, Cleaning Inspector Mohammad Abdun Noor, and Mohammad Sohel.

Heavy rain on Thursday night caused waterlogging in several areas of the capital. Many areas around New Market were submerged till late Friday night.

WORLD RIVERS DAY

STAR REPORT

"We need to raise awareness about rivers among the new generation. No matter how much development we achieve, it won't be sustainable without river protection," said Muzibur Rahman Howlader, former chairman of National River Conservation Commission, yesterday.

He said this while speaking at an event at Jatiya Press Club, marking World Rivers Day.

Waterkeepers Bangladesh, along with several organisations, observed the day across the country, holding various programmes aimed at raising awareness about river pollution and conservation in 12 locations, including Dhaka.

The other locations included Cox's Bazar Sadar, Pekua, Taltali, Maheshkhali, Mongla, Kutubdia, Kalapara, Patharghata, Barguna Sadar, Paikgacha, and Barishal Sadar.

In the capital, they organised a seminar titled "River is a living entity" at Jatiya Press Club around 10:30am.

Speakers said despite Bangladesh legally recognising rivers as living entities, the onslaught against the country's rivers continues. Many rivers are

DENGUE CASES LAST WEEK

Over 72pc deaths due to shock syndrome

Shows DGHS data; death toll crosses 900

DIPAN NANDY

As many as 89 dengue patients died last week alone. Meanwhile, at least 20,155 dengue cases were reported during this time. Of this, 14,436 patients are from outside Dhaka, while the rest 5,719 patients are from the capital.

According to Directorate General of Health Services data, 63 percent of the 89 patients died within a day after hospitalisation, with an additional 24 percent passing away within two to three days, 8 percent within four to five days, and 5 percent after more than seven days.

Around 73 percent of the 89 dengue patients, who passed away between September 17 and 23, died of shock syndrome while 15.17 percent died of expanded dengue syndrome, according to DGHS data.

Some 1.1 percent of the deceased had comorbidity while 1.1 percent died from dengue hemorrhagic fever, shows the DGHS data released yesterday.

SHOCK SYNDROME

Dengue shock syndrome (DSS) is a life-threatening complication of dengue fever, which typically occurs in individuals who have previously been infected with one serotype of the dengue virus and are then infected with a different serotype.

DSS is characterised by a sudden drop in blood pressure, which can lead to shock. This is often accompanied by severe abdominal pain, persistent vomiting, and bleeding tendencies, such as nosebleeds, gum bleeding, or easy bruising. Besides, DSS also results in excessive fluid leakage and rapid drop in platelet counts.

Dengue shock syndrome is a life-threatening complication of dengue fever, which typically occurs in individuals who have previously been infected with one serotype of the dengue virus and are then infected with a different serotype.

Meanwhile, World Health Organization in 2012 had coined the term "expanded dengue syndrome" to describe patients that do not fit into either DHF (dengue hemorrhagic fever) or DSS but show atypical symptoms in vital organ systems such as the cardiovascular system, neurological system, kidneys, gut, and hematological system.

Two temples vandalised in Nawabganj

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Two temples in Dhaka's Nawabganj upazila were vandalised by unidentified miscreants on Saturday night.

The incident took place at Bhurakhali village located on the bordering area between Nawabganj and Manikganj's Singair.

"The Kali temple was set on fire around 11:30pm. It was partially damaged as locals doused the fire immediately," said Ananda Bepari, president of the temple's management committee. After a few minutes, three idols were vandalised in another temple located about a hundred yards away.

Sirajul Islam, officer-in-charge of Nawabganj Police Station, said they are looking into the incident.
