

Discussion on freelancing held

STAR BUSINESS DESK

Eastern Bank PLC, in association with Bangladesh Freelancer Development Society (BFDS), organised a panel discussion on "Freelancing: Moving towards a Smart Bangladesh" at the bank's head office in Dhaka yesterday.

MA Mannan, minister for planning, as chief guest shed light on how the government is aiding citizens in such a manner that even from remote parts of the country, freelancers are able to work and earn foreign currency, according to a press release.

Tanjiba Rahman, chairperson of the BFDS, moderated the discussion, where Md Abdur Rahim Khan, additional secretary of the ministry of commerce, and Md Mostafa Kamal, additional secretary and director general of the department of ICT, took part as panelists and highlighted the significance of freelancing towards building a Smart Bangladesh.

Among others, Ahmed Shaheen, additional managing director and head of corporate banking of the bank, and M Khorshed Anwar, deputy managing director and head of retail and SME banking, were present.

China's night time economy on cusp of big growth

ANN/ CHINA DAILY

China's nighttime economy is on track for faster development, experts said at a recent tourism forum.

This is based on the market performance and trends observed during spring and summer this year, said Dai Bin, president of the China Tourism Academy (CTA), at the 2023 China Nighttime Economic Forum in Sanya, Hainan province, recently.

"With the development of urbanization and consumption, consumer behavior has undergone changes, and the need for cultural experiences, consumption and services at night has grown stronger," Dai said.

Currently, the nighttime economy links with almost all walks of life, especially the consumer goods and services industry.

Nighttime consumption is gaining a bigger foothold of the total, and the period between 6 pm and 10 pm is now deemed by many as the golden hours of the nighttime economy, he added.

Related consumption scenarios have also expanded, with nighttime entertainment consumption seen rising, Dai said.

"In addition to traditional consumption venues like dining and shopping, there are new entertainment activities, such as performing arts, scripted shows, light shows, music festivals and live house performances.

Currently, the nighttime economy links with almost all walks of life, especially the consumer goods and services industry

The nation has designated 243 venues dedicated to nighttime consumption," he said.

According to the CTA, the development of the nighttime economy in key towns and tourist villages, such as Hongcun in Anhui province and Nianhua Bay in Jiangsu province, has helped bridge the differences between cities and towns, and more consumers, especially in small towns, have a better consumption experience at their doorstep.

Since the nation optimised its Covid-19 response measures in December, China's tourism sector has been on a recovery track, and it is imperative for the nation to find new driving forces and explore new tourist attractions to boost its momentum, experts said.

"Sanya, as one of the most well-known coastal tourism cities in China, sees most of its seaside tourism products available only during the daytime. Efforts extending the consumption scenarios will support its ambitions of building itself into a major international tourism consumption destination," Dai said. "Sanya, if it succeeds in this direction, will be a sample case for coastal cities across China."

Dai also said that amid the construction of a free trade port, more international tourists will arrive in Hainan in the future.

Albert Yip, director-general of the Sanya Tourism Promotion Board under the municipal government, said: "The forum is a representative, influential and professional forum, which can provide guidance for the future development of Sanya's nighttime economy."
