Garbage, mostly vegetable peelings and scraps, are being dumped on the banks of the Buriganga from the nearby wholesale kitchen market in the capital's Shyambazar area. While these scraps are biodegradable and pose no serious harm to the soil, their unplanned disposal not only pollutes the riverbed but also its water, posing a significant risk to the marine life. The "pictorial technique" of teaching should be followed nationwide as it significantly boosts interest in learning among pre-primary children, said teachers and practitioners at a discussion yesterday.

In pictorial technique, a card is printed with a picture and a word. Then, a set of such cards, both in Bangla and English, arranged in a pocket board, are introduced to the students by a teacher.

The students are then called to pick up a picture and identify the object.

Findings of a study on "Kajoli Early Childhood Learning Model" was revealed at the discussion, organized by Research Initiatives Bangladesh, at a city hotel.

Pictorial technique is a part of the Kajoli learning model.

The study assessed 129 children at six Kajoli learning centres in Nilphamari, and found about 98 percent of them being able to correctly identify a Bangla word from a set of

Participation of women migrant workers from Bangladesh has been showing a declining trend in recent years, said speakers at an event yesterday.

They also pointed out several factors such as absence of social reintegration services, hazardous work environment, and stigma against the returnees as the leading causes behind this declining trend.

In 2016, more than one lakh

Bangladeshi women (15.58 percent) were among 757,731 workers who went abroad.

In subsequent years, the percentage of female migration from Bangladesh came down to 13.85 percent in 2018, 12 percent in 2021, nine percent in 2022, and only five percent so far this year.

These statistics were presented in a seminar titled "Policy Framework Regarding Reintegration of Returning Women Migrants", organised by Center
