NOMINATION SUBMISSION

Polls code takes leave on the last day

17 AL nominees asked to explain 'breach of conduct'

STAR REPORT

Many candidates, mostly Awami League runners and leaders running as independents, violated the electoral code of conduct yesterday by staging a huge show of strength while submitting their nomination papers.

On the last day for submitting the papers yesterday, they went to the offices of the returning officers (ROs) with a huge number of supporters. Some were in motorcades, reports our local correspondents.

Incidents of attacks on journalists and opponents were also reported.

The election enquiry committees issued show-cause notices to 17 AL lawmakers, including four ministers, for allegedly violating the code.

The electoral code of conduct says that government vehicles, equipment or other benefits cannot be used for election campaigns. It forbids any procession of people or vehicles and the show of strength while submitting nomination papers.

Election Commissioner Brig Gen (retd) Ahsan Habib Khan, while talking to The Daily Star yesterday, urged all to strictly follow the electoral code.

"Stern actions will be taken as per the law if any candidate violates the electoral code of conduct. Show-cause notices were served to several candidates.

"We will not accept any violation of the code of conduct. The commission has adopted a zero-tolerance policy against violators," he said, adding, "We will create equal opportunities for all candidates."

Jahanara Begum, 70, came to capital's Abdul Gani Road at 8:00am to collect kitchen essentials from a TCB truck at subsidised prices and ensure that her daughter in-law can cook lunch on time for her bed-ridden son and grandchildren. However, as the truck hadn't arrived even till noon, she had to leave empty-handed, wondering what her family would eat today. The soaring market prices of essentials have left many from the low-income group, like Jahanara, desperate and helpless.

30 parties in race for JS; BNP, allies stay away

MOHIUDDIN ALAMGIR

The BNP and its like-minded parties are formally out of the polls as nobody from those submitted nomination papers yesterday, the deadline for the submissions.

Candidates from 30 out of the 44 registered political parties have filed nominations for the national election, Election Commission Secretary Jahangir Alam told The Daily Star last night.

Citing primary statistics, he said 2,741 candidates have submitted nomination papers. However, he could not give the names of the parties.

"The deadline for submission of nomination papers expired at 4:00pm today [yesterday]. It will not be extended," Jahangir said in the evening.

Asked whether the election was destined to be held without the BNP's participation, he said, "You have to understand that."

Only 12 political parties contested the 2014 elections amid boycott by the BNP and other opposition parties, resulting in 153 lawmakers getting elected unopposed.

In 2018, a total of 39 parties ran, but the BNP and many others rejected the election results citing widespread irregularities.

This time, the BNP, its allies and some left-leaning political parties have been demanding general election under a non-party polls-time government. But

LABOUR ISSUES

Bangladesh's duty access to EU in jeopardy

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Bangladesh's continued eligibility to duty preferences to the EU, its largest export destination, has come under question because of the labour rights situation.

This came up in the European Commission's assessment report on the EU's Generalised Scheme of Preferences (GSP) programme published on November 21.

The GSP is the EU's main unilateral trade policy to support vulnerable developing countries' exports to the EU conditional on the respect of international standards on human rights, labour rights, environment and climate and good governance.

In recent years, the EU has stepped up its engagement with three GSP beneficiary countries: Bangladesh, Cambodia and Myanmar.

The EU is engaging with the three countries due to the gravity of alleged shortcomings in respecting core human rights and labour rights standards, as testified by reports from the United Nations, the International Labour

Henry Kissinger dead at 100

AGENCIES

Henry Kissinger, the relentlessly ambitious US diplomat whose unapologetic promotion of raw American power helped shape the post-World War II world, died Wednesday, his consulting firm said. He was 100.

Kissinger, arguably the most identifiable secretary of state of modern times, died at his home in Connecticut, announced Kissinger Associates, through which the late diplomat grew wealthy helping businesses for decades after his government career.

It said that Kissinger's family would hold a private funeral, with a memorial service to take place later in New York, where Kissinger grew up after his Jewish family fled Nazi Germany.

The statement did not provide a cause of death. Kissinger had remained active even as a centenarian, travelling to China in July to meet President Xi Jinping.
