

To help parents, teachers, caregivers and adults everywhere to navigate potentially difficult conversations, Save the Children UK Youth Advisory Board has worked to come up with five top tips on how to speak to children about climate change.

1 HEAR THEM OUT

Make time and hold space for them to share how they're feeling. Don't underestimate their ability to ask tough questions, propose smart solutions, and teach you something, too. It's okay that we might not have all the answers. What's most important is that we commit to staying informed and creating open and honest conversations with children.
