RISING SEA LEVELS 9 lakh in south may be displaced by 2050

Says new report on climate change impacts in Bangladesh STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Sea level rise may displace almost nine lakh people from southern Bangladesh by 2050, because their homes and livelihood will be jeopardised.

By the end of the century, the situation will be even worse as between 12 percent and 18 percent of Bangladesh's coastal area is projected to be submerged by rising seas, says a report released yesterday by the International Centre for Climate Change and Development (ICCCAD).

This will have devastating consequences for vital food crops, and more people will be forced to leave their homes, adds the report titled Climate Change Impacts in Bangladesh.

Currently, the estimated annual average loss due to cyclones is $1 billion, which is 0.7 percent of the GDP.

"Due to our country's geographical position, we are witnessing flooding, depletion of water sources, rising sea levels, and the intrusion of salinity. Projections indicate that millions, perhaps 1/7 of the population, might face displacement as per the World Bank's estimations," Saber H Chowdhury, minister for environment, forest and climate change, was quoted as saying in the report.

Sea level rise is projected to lead to a 6-9 percent decline in the country's rice production. Increasingly saline waters are also projected to disrupt fisheries, which will disproportionately affect poor coastal communities, for whom fish is an important source of protein.

The estimated annual average loss due to cyclones is $1 billion, which is 0.7 percent of the GDP.

Saline water can also infiltrate groundwater and surface water sources, affecting drinking water supplies and human health.

"Sea level around South Asia will continue to rise over the 21st century, increasing flooding in low-lying Bangladesh. This will devastate vital food crops, forcing more people to leave their homes," says professor AKM Saiful Islam, director of the Institute of Water and Flood Management (IWFM) of Buet and a lead author of the report.

The development came as the final results of last Thursday's polls were finally announced yesterday. No party won a simple majority to form the next government.

However, the results put independents, backed by jailed former prime minister Imran Khan, in the lead with 93 of 264 seats. In total, independents won 101 seats.

With 75 seats, PML-N lacked a clear majority but came out as the largest single party in parliament as Khan's Pakistan Peoples Party leader Bilawal, the son of assassinated premier Benazir Bhutto, remains a major player with at least 54 seats. The Muttahida Qaumi Movement (MQM), a regional party, won 17.

Imran and Sharif have both declared victory in the polls and both parties said they claimed the right to form the next government.

As the final results came out, a flurry of activity was noticed in Lahore, the PML-N headquarters.

The situation has been calm since Wednesday but people heard gunshots from far away from the Myanmar side, said AKM Jahangir Aziz, chairman of Ghumdhum union parishad in Naikhongchhari.

A few isolated gunshots also were heard in Lomba Beel, Ulubunia and Unchiprang areas of Whykong union in Teknaf, according to locals.

Some Rohingya armed group members could enter Bangladesh as they are being ousted by the Arakan Army, said Noor Ahmed Anwari, chairman of Whykong union parishad in Teknaf.

He urged the Border Guard Bangladesh to increase surveillance along the border to prevent any kind of infiltration.

The accelerating impacts of climate change in Bangladesh highlights an urgent need to scale up international action against climate change.

Bangladesh repeatedly experiences extreme climate events like heatwaves and tropical cyclones, the report adds.

In 2019 and 2000, the country experienced 185 extreme weather events, making it the seventh most vulnerable to climate change in the world.

Government adaptation policy and local initiatives have saved many lives and, so far, averted the worst impacts of climate change, the report says.

Bangladesh is recognised as a global leader in adaptation and resilience. In 2005, Bangladesh was one of the first least developed countries to develop a national adaptation programme of action.

By the end of the century, even under a very low emissions scenario, Bangladesh could see a further 0.8°C of warming compared with 1981–2010, and heavier SEE PAGE 2 COL 1

FORMING JS STANDING COMMITTEES Conflict of interest takes back seat

RASHIDUL HASAN

Many members of 20 parliamentary standing committees own businesses in sectors they are supposed to watch over, which according to experts is a conflict of interest.

The Jatiya Sangsad recently formed 50 standing committees. Thirtynine of them are tasked with ensuring accountability and transparency at the ministries.

That some of the MPs, who are in the ministry-related committees, have conflicts of interest was found during an analysis of the affidavits the individuals submitted to the Election Commission.

According to the JS Rules of Procedure, a member shall not be appointed to a parliamentary committee if their personal, financial or direct interest is linked with matters that are dealt by the committee.

A parliamentary committee of a ministry is supposed to investigate irregularities and serious complaints against one or more ministries under it. It is also tasked with examining and reviewing bills.

At the recently formed committees, 12 MPs who were ministers and state ministers of the last government are committee chairmen.

Former Commerce Minister Tipu Munshi is the chairman of the JS body on commerce ministry.

According to the JS Rules of Procedure, a member shall not be appointed to a parliamentary committee if their personal, financial or direct interest is linked with matters that are dealt by the committee.
