Salinity seeping into northern groundwater

Finds WDB survey; excessive use of salt in fish farming blamed

PINAKI ROY

The salinity of the groundwater surrounding fish farms in the northern region has been on the rise as fish farmers have been using large quantities of salt in their ponds, a survey finds.

Bangladesh Water Development Board (BWDB) surveyed the groundwater quality of around 40 monitoring wells in Puthia, Bagmara and Durgapur upazilas of Rajshahi; Singra and Naldanga upazilas in Natore; and Atrai upazila in Naogaon.

A monitoring well is used to measure or monitor the level, quality, quantity or movement of subsurface water.

The survey found that the EC (electric conductivity: the quantity of dissolved salt in water measured by an electronic device) of the water in those wells ranged from 400 to 1,400.

Anwar Zahid, director of groundwater hydrology of BWDB who led the survey, said, "We have found the EC

RIPPLES OF POLLUTION ... As a vessel plies the Buriganga, the blackened ripples show proof of the intense pollution that the river is choking on. Once a mighty thriving river, it has now become a dumping ground. Surrounding factories and homes release various pollutants, including toxic chemicals, harming the biodiversity in and around the river. On this World Water Day, it is imperative to remember that the rivers are the country's lifeline.

FIRST PHASE OF UPAZILA POLLS

Officials from EC, not admin, to be ROs, AROs

EC decision aimed at enhancing its capacity; election in 152 upazilas May 8

MOHIUDDIN ALAMGIR

The Election Commission has made its own officials the returning officers and assistant returning officers for the elections to 152 upazila parishads scheduled for May 8.

This is the first time the EC has asked its own workforce to conduct polls in so many places, EC officials said, adding that the tasks were usually shared by administration cadre officials.

For the May 8 elections, there are 59 returning officers (ROs), one for each district, and 152 assistant returning officers (AROs), one for each upazila.

Elections will be held in the rest 329 upazilas on May 23, May 29 and June 5.

District election officers or senior election officers are the ROs while upazila election officers are the AROs.

The commission has made the decision to develop the skills of its officials, according to Ashok Kumar Debnath, additional secretary of the EC. A notice regarding the development was issued last night.

In the next phases of the upazila parishad election, either the administration officials or the EC officials will do the task. They will not share the responsibility.

GAZA CEASEFIRE

US moves draft resolution at UN

70 more Palestinians killed

AGENCIES

The United States has circulated for the first time a draft UN resolution calling for an "immediate" ceasefire in the Israel-Hamas war, as warnings grow of famine in besieged Gaza.

Washington had blocked previous Security Council texts using the word "immediate" but US top diplomat Antony Blinken confirmed the shift in position on Wednesday.

Blinken, who is to meet five Arab foreign ministers in Egypt yesterday, stressed any immediate truce must be linked to the release of hostages snatched by Palestinian militants during the October 7 attack that set off the war.

The Israeli bombardment of Gaza continued overnight with the health ministry in the Hamas-run territory saying at least 70 people had been killed, pushing the overall toll towards 32,000.

GIANTS OF THE SUNDARBANS

A saltwater crocodile spotted roaming the Sundarbans recently. Native to saltwater habitats, brackish wetlands and freshwater rivers, saltwater crocodiles are known as the largest living reptiles in the world. As a matter of fact, these opportunistic carnivores can prey on almost any animal that enters their territories, including sharks and humans. They often ambush their prey and swallow it whole. What is more interesting is that saltwater crocs have been found to sleep with one eye open, keeping one half of the brain awake and alert for predators. These giant but majestic beasts of the seas are often threatened by illegal killing and habitat loss, pushing them to the brink of endangerment.

INDOMITABLE MARCH

The tripartite meeting: Mujib, Yahya, and Bhutto

SHAMSUDDOZA SAJEN

March 22, 1971

On the morning of March 22, 1971, Bangabandhu called on Yahya. Bhutto was also present at the meeting. The three met face-to-face for the first time since the December elections. Bangabandhu was annoyed at the presence of Bhutto since he had told Yahya that direct negotiation with Bhutto was out of the question. Bhutto was also disturbed since he had the understanding from the "clarifications" sent by Yahya that such talks would be arranged once he was in Dhaka. [Richard Sisson and Leo E Rose, War and Secession: Pakistan, India, and the Creation of Bangladesh, UCP 1990, pg-122]

Bhutto provides an account of the tripartite meeting in his memoir:

Mujibur Rahman then turned to the president and asked him if he had given his final approval to the proposals of the Awami League. The president reminded him that it was necessary for me [Bhutto] also to agree and for that reason I was present at the discussions. On that Mujibur Rahman remarked
