Bangladesh is experiencing a faster sea-level rise than the global average of 3.42mm a year, which will impact food production and livelihoods even more than previously thought, government studies have found.

Twelve coastal districts, where the impacts are expected to be severe, would be subjected to waterlogging, high salinity, crop damage, high temperatures, and excessive rainfall.

People will lose their homes, and poverty will increase, according to forecast studies, which were concluded recently but were yet to be made public.

The average annual sea-level rise for the Ganges tidal flood plain, the Meghna estuarine flood plain, and the Chittagong coastal plain is found to vary from 3.6mm to 4.5mm, 3.7mm to 4.1mm, and 3.1mm to 3.7mm between 1993 and 2019.

"Due to the present rates of local sea-level rise, more than 1 million people may be displaced," found the study titled "Estimation of Sea Level Rise (SLR) in Bangladesh using Satellite Altimetry Data" conducted by the Department of Environment.

Metro, railway tussle over yard at Kamalapur

BR says MRT-6 yard will frustrate its plan for Multimodal Transport Hub

TUHIN SHUBHRA ADHIKARY

The metro rail authorities have planned to construct a stable yard near the Kamalapur station, but the Bangladesh Railway argues it conflicts with a plan previously agreed upon by the two parties.

BR authorities say their initiative to turn Kamalapur Railway Station into a Multimodal Transport Hub could face obstacles if the 300-metre long yards built there.

However, the metro rail authorities assert that they have to build the yard for smooth operation of trains on Mass Rapid Transit (MRT) Line-6, which is now being extended to Kamalapur.

Railway authorities has written to Dhaka Mass Transit Company Ltd (DMTCL), the implementing agency of the MRT line projects, expressing reservations about the move.
