'The country needed him now'

Say speakers on Serajul Alam Khan

STAFF CORRESPONDENT

In the times of criminalised politics, the leadership of Serajul Alam Khan was very much needed, said speakers at a discussion yesterday.

Serajul Alam Khan Foundation and Research Institute organised the event marking his first death anniversary at Jatiya Press Club.

Jatiya Samajtantrik Dal (JSD-Inu) President Hasanul Haq Inu highlighted Serajul Alam Khan's pivotal role in advancing the six-point demand.

"He and Bangabandhu Sheikh Mujibur Rahman were like a single soul dwelling in two bodies.

He worked as a field hero to implement Bangabandhu's skillful decisions," he said.

Supreme Court lawyer and rights activist ZI Khan Panna said the Liberation War of Bangladesh and Serajul are inseparable.

Serajul Alam Khan

"His [Serajul] contribution to the history of Bangladesh's Liberation War could not be erased despite repeated attempts.

Even in the final days of his life, he wanted to see unity among people. However, in today's Bangladesh, those who earn in dishonest ways are being encouraged," he said.

Khalekuzzaman, adviser of the Bangladesh Samajtantrik Dal, said Serajul will be remembered for his uncompromising political approach.

Shushashoner Jonno Nagorik Secretary Badiul Alam Majumdar said Bangladesh would not have been liberated so quickly if it weren't for people like Serajul Alam Khan.

Mahbub Ullah, economist and former Dhaka University professor, expressed concerns about capitalism's criminalised form in Bangladesh, stating that overcoming it will require even more effort than in the seventies and eighties.

He said the absence of Serajul has left a void in this struggle.

Journalist Abu Saeed Khan, president of the foundation, presided over the meeting while writer and researcher Shamsuddin Peyara read an article titled "Freedom Struggle and Serajul Alam Khan".

Saidur alleged that Razzak's nephew, Azim Mahmud, led the attack.

Both Razzak and Azim denied the allegation, saying that Saidur's supporters had attacked them earlier.

Empower indigenous

Rezwana Karim Snigdha, an associate professor at Jahangirnagar University, highlighted the silence surrounding violence against indigenous women within their communities, leading to social and legal discrimination.

Shahnaz Sumi, director of Bangladesh Nari Progati Sangha, said the women's movement and the indigenous women's movement share the same foundation.

"But indigenous women experience discrimination on multiple levels -- as women, as indigenous individuals, and specifically as indigenous women."

Maria Mrong, convener of BIWN, said awareness has increased in both indigenous and broader women's communities.

"If we become well-educated, we can achieve even more," she added.

The speakers advocated for constitutional recognition for people living in the CHT and the full implementation of the peace accord.

Gourango Patro, vice-chairperson of Kapaeng Foundation, and Rekha Saha, legal aid secretary of Bangladesh Mahila Parishad, also spoke.

A realistic

He suggested that the government should allocate special funds in the budget for cash transfers to those affected by the recent cyclone.

More innovative strategies in the health budget, alongside an increase in its allocation, could have reduced the burden of health expenditure on people during this period of uncontrolled inflation, he said.

He also urged the government to increase the allocation for the agriculture sector, as it increased to only 3.59 percent from the existing 3.5 percent.

Atiur also suggested prioritising adding new taxpayers rather than burdening those already paying taxes. For this, the entire revenue collection structure needs to be overhauled, including the capacity of the revenue board and digitisation, he said.

Meanwhile, he remarked that the proposal of a 15 percent tax on black money against the 30 percent tax on the highest income through legitimate means is unacceptable.

Finally, at the end of the day, the proposed budget is realistic and timely, he observed.

However, since many cuts have to be made, implementing this tight budget will require more skill and dedication than ever before, he added.
