

These fishers could catch only a handful of hilsa from the Meghna even though it is the peak season.

SUSHANTA GHOSH, Barishal

Fishermen from Bhola, Barishal and Kuakata are returning empty handed from the rivers in the coastal region due to a lack of hilsa in the water bodies, even though it is the harvest season of the fish. Many of them had taken out loans to take their boats and trawlers to the rivers for catching hilsa, and are now worried about how they will pay back the loans and remain aloof with their families under the circumstances. According to the Department of Fisheries, the hilsa season got delayed a bit due to heat and climate change, and more fish will be in the rivers a few days later. "I could manage to catch only around 2-3 kilogrammes of hilsa in the last four days, which we had to eat while staying on the trawler in the Meghna river. As such, I returned empty handed. I wonder how I am going to return the money I had borrowed," said Russel Majhi, a fisherman from Tulatali village under Bhola Sadar upazila.

Fishers rue lack of fish in rivers; officials say situation to improve soon

Monir Majhi, another fisher, said that it costs Tk 3,000 including oil to go to river once. "Six of us went to catch hilsa, but we returned empty handed," he added. Fisherman Md Jasim Mia said hilsas are avoiding the rivers as ships from Chattogram are using this river route. Some other fishermen said siltation and pollution of the rivers and presence of a huge number of fishing trawlers are reasons why hilsas are not entering the rivers from the Bay. Nuru Majhi, president of Mahipur Fishermen's Association, said there is no hilsa at Kuakata, Alipur and Mahipur fish landing stations. He said around 50,000 people in this region, engaged in hilsa catching and trading, are now in dire straits. According to sources at the Divisional Fisheries Office in Barishal, there are 4.21 lakh registered fishermen in the division. Although at least 2,000-3,000 maunds of hilsa were expected to arrive daily at the 25 fish landing stations in the division, even half of it has not been received, the sources also said. "It is not true that there is no hilsa at all; the number, however, is much less than expected. The situation may change in a few days when more hilsa will enter the rivers once the temperature of water becomes favourable for laying eggs," said Nripendra Nath Biswas, deputy director of the Barishal divisional fisheries office.

DELAY IN MEDICAL REPORTS Probe, trial pending for 965 cases

FM MIZANUR RAHAMAN, Ctg

Investigations into at least 965 cases filed with different police stations under Chattogram Metropolitan Police are currently halted due to delay in issuance of medical reports in connection with the cases by Chattogram Medical College Hospital. As such, the trial procedures of the cases also remain pending with different metropolitan courts in Chattogram. According to medical, police and court staffers, these reports are crucial for any case, as they can change its whole merit. Sometimes the medical staffers take bribes to manipulate the reports and thereby change police investigation.

The cases filed under the penal code with police stations and courts require medical certificates for police reports. "I had to bribe medical staffers Tk 500-2,000 to collect medical certificates to submit my investigation report on time," said an SI of CMP's West Zone, wishing anonymity. Several other police officers of different zones of CMP echoed him. In 2022, the CMCH authorities launched a probe into allegations of bribery against an assistant registrar of the casualty department. He allegedly used to take bribes from IOs on the basis of the case's merit.

The officers alleged that the IOs even have to bribe hospital officials Tk 500-5,000 based on the category and merit of the cases to get the necessary reports including post mortem, and DNA, forensic and medical certificates.

The matter came to light after judicial magistrates openly spoke up about the matter at the police-magistracy conference on March 6, although investigation officers have been facing the issue for a long time. This correspondent talked to at least 15 sub-inspectors and inspectors of 16 police stations under CMP in this regard. The officers alleged that the IOs even have to bribe hospital officials Tk 500-5,000 based on the category and merit of the cases to get the necessary reports including post mortem, and DNA, forensic and medical certificates. Most complaints regarding delayed issuance of medical reports and bribery are against the casualty and orthopaedic departments of CMCH. The casualty department provides reports on physical assault, serious injuries or stabbing while the orthopaedics department gives reports on broken limbs or other serious injuries.

At the police-magistracy conference, Rabiul Alam, chief metropolitan magistrate of Chattogram, urged the authorities concerned of CMCH to issue the pending medical reports as early as possible. "It is a critical issue. We are working together to resolve the matter," said Nishkriti Chakma, deputy commissioner (crime and operations) at CMP Headquarters. Contacted, Brig Gen Shamim
